ILLINOIS HOUSE JOINS SENATE IN WEEK-END RECESS

Chicago Tax Funding Bills, Passed By House Yesterday

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11—(AP)—The House of Representatives was put on record today in favor of a reorganization of the state Pardon and Parole board, suggested by Representative Gordon W. Childers, Republican, of Normal, a member of the Prison Investigation Commission.

The House adopted the Childers amendment to a bill cutting down the board membership from ten to five. The measure was advanced to third reading and will be voted upon next week.

The change contemplated by Childers would not be effective until January 1933. The Childers amendment recommends the chairman, who also is Supervisor of Prisons, shall be an attorney and that of the other members should consist of a farmer, banker, representative of labor, a manufacturer and a newspaperman.

An amendment to abolish all Assistant Directors in the state code department was defeated by the House.

Representative James T. Burns, Democrat, Kankakee, introduced bills to abolish eight state commissions including the Buy-Illinois Products, Deep Waterway, Spanish War Veterans Encampment, Taxation and Expenditures, New State Training Institution, Port Authority and Road commissions and city and village collectors.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11—(UP)—Its activities confined to advancement of non-controversial measures, because of the lack of attendance, the House of Representatives of the Illinois General Assembly joined the state Senate today in an adjournment until next Tuesday.

The House today enacted on only two bills, both of which have been passed by the Senate, and advanced them to third readings. One was introduced by Senator Henry Dunlap, Repn., Savoy, and provides a license fee of $23.50 for vehicles and tractors weighing between 8,000 and 10,000 pounds. The other measure sponsored by Senator A. S. Cuthbertson, Repn., Bunker Hill, has to do with teachers' salaries.

Both Houses are expected to recess next week until after the April primaries. The recess was scheduled to be taken this week, but passage of the Chicago funding plan bills in the House yesterday resulted in a decision to hold the Assembly over until next week when an attempt will be made to pass the program in the Senate.

Bill Face's Opposition
An effort to advance the funding bills to third reading in the Senate early today met with failure and indications are that there will be strong opposition to the program when it is taken up again next week.

Speaker David Shanahan today appointed a committee composed of Representatives Roger Little, W. Z. Black, W. E. Gilmore all of Champaign; Gus Johnson, Paxton; and W. O. Edwards, Danville; to attend the funeral services tomorrow for Mrs. Henry M. Dunlap, wife of Senator Dunlap.

Governor L. L. Emmerson today signed a series of bills introduced by Rep. Roy Adamowski, Democrat, of Chicago, giving insurance companies authority to purchase city, state and county tax warrants. The bills all contained emergency clauses and became effective at once.

Adamowski declares the new laws will open a new market for the sale of various tax warrants and will enable various political subdivisions of the state to pay employees that have gone without pay.

The governor also signed appropriation bills totaling $150,000 to defray expenses of the second and third special sessions of the Assembly.

69 Bills Discarded
A total of sixty-nine bills were tossed into the discard by the House yesterday. The measures consisted chiefly of bills in committee and some that have been held on first reading since their introduction last November.

The Senate adjourned until next Tuesday after holding a midnight session to pass a series of six bills designed to relieve public treasurers from personal liability for funds deposited in banks designated by their political subdivision.

The bills apply to city and county treasurers, school funds handled by the township treasurers, town funds in charge of the Supervisor and road district money in care of the Supervisor and road district clerk. Each measure carries the provision that deposits in any one bank shall not exceed three-fourths of its capital and surplus.

The measures had been requested by downstate communities where many treasurers have experienced difficulty in obtaining approval of their bonds.

DIXON GOES AHEAD
In these trying times of low business, low prices for farm products, poor markets for manufactured goods, Dixon has much to be thankful for because Dixon people and Dixon business houses are on a basis so much more sound and substantial than in most communities that by contrast this community is far ahead of most.

It is true that depressed values have caused hardships on many people, but it is equally true that the reduced prices on commodities of nearly every kind have made it possible to buy more for a dollar than in many decades.

In today's issue of the Telegraph Dixon merchants advertise their Dollar Day bargains. Read them over and you will find that probably not ever in your lifetime have you been able to buy fine quality merchandise at such low figures.

Whether you want an automobile tire or a package of tobacco or a suit of clothes or a roast of meat or some new dishes or a bed room suite—no matter what you want to buy, you can come to Dixon Saturday and find thousands of bargains such as you have never seen before and probably never will again.

No Cement Contract To Medusa Company

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11—(UP)—Contracts for the purchase of 4,105,000 barrels of Portland cement at an average cost of $14.44 per barrel have been awarded four companies located in the middle west, Director H. H. Cleveland of the state Department of Public Works and Buildings announced today.

Seventy-eight per cent of this cement will be manufactured by Illinois mills, and the remaining amount will be supplied by mills closely bordering the state, Cleveland announced.

The Marquette Cement Manufacturing Co., Oglesby, received the largest contract for 2,500,000 barrels. Other contracts went to Dewey Portland Cement Co., Davenport, Ia. for 155,000 barrels; Missouri Portland Cement Co., St. Louis, Mo., 135,000 barrels and Alpha Portland Cement Co., La Salle, 1,300,000 barrels.

Divorcee Runs For St. Louis Sheriff

Clayton, Mo., Feb. 11—(UP)—A 38-year-old divorcee, mother of five children, announced herself today a candidate for the Republican nomination as Sheriff of St. Louis county, on a platform calling for a drive on "wife beaters" and alimony evaders.

She is Sophie Vogel. The husband she divorced three years ago is $1,300 in arrears on alimony payments.

Miss Vogel (her maiden name was restored on court order) now is employed as a house keeper. Her children are in an orphanage.

"I expect the united support of all Republican women," she said in her candidacy announcement. "Some men have asked me if I have had any police experience. My answer is no, but I will learn to shoot quick enough."

Truce Advocates Call On President

Washington, Feb. 11—(AP)—Six score business executives, who placed before President Hoover today a proposal for "a two year's truce in destructive competition" were directed by him to reconsider their suggestion.

The group, representing independent producers and distributors throughout the country, returned at once from the White House to continue their conference at a hotel.

The proposal for a two year moratorium in competition was asked as an arbitrary period, during which there might be "investigation by a non-partisan committee of Congress of existing business conditions."

Members of the group disclosed that the President had objected on the grounds that two year moratorium would run afoul of the Sherman anti-trust act.

DIXON MAN IN NARROW ESCAPE FROM RAILROAD CROSSING DEATH TODAY

David Emmert, 243 Swiss street, narrowly escaped death or serious injury this morning at 7:45 when the Ford sedan he was driving was struck by a south bound Illinois Central freight train at the Squires avenue crossing. The train was running very slowly as it approached the crossing and Mr. Emmert was driving north, returning to his home from a shopping trip.

The heavy locomotive, No. 2910, struck the car amidships, turning it completely over into a ditch along the railroad right of way. The windshield and two glasses on the side of

CONGRESS PUTS FORCES AT WORK FOR SMALL BANKS

Non-Partisan Support Is Given Hoover Plea For More Credit

BULLETIN
Washington, Feb. 11—(AP)—Congressional leaders completed the draft of the emergency measure for expanding the re-discounting facilities of the Federal Reserve today and planned for immediate hearings.

BULLETIN
New York, Feb. 11—The effort in Washington to restore the normal functions of banking gave the stock market its most powerful boost in nearly two months today.

While Wall Street was not entirely of one mind regarding the proposed revision of Federal Reserve practice, most leading bankers seemed heartily in favor of the measure, some expressing the view that it was the most promising of all measures yet undertaken to check the deflation.

Washington, Feb. 11—(AP)—Congress put its forces today behind an emergency measure to increase greatly the amount of cash available to American banks and business.

At the urging of President Hoover, Democratic and Republican leaders laid plans to expedite the bill through both Houses on a strictly non-partisan basis. It was being completed for introduction today by Senator Glass (D. Va.) and Chairman Steagall (D. Ala.) of the House Banking committee, with the assistance of Republican colleagues.

What the measure will do is to relieve the pressure on small Federal Reserve member banks which have exhausted their discounting paper, permitting the Federal Reserve System to rediscount other sound securities of these banks which are not now technically eligible.

It will make all the assets acquired by the reserve banks under present law available, for one year only, as collateral for Federal Reserve notes, up to 60 per cent of the security. At present for lack of other eligible collateral, the Reserve System has in the Treasury almost double the 40 per cent gold required to be deposited against its notes. This change will release, it is calculated, nearly a billion in free gold, available for all credit purposes.

It is not proposed at this time to issue new currency against this gold, however. It is to be used rather for handling the paper which the new bill will make discountable.

The measure will supplement the efforts of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as both are designed for relieving the frozen condition of the nation's credit system, but the administration is hopeful the present plan will get even faster results than are in sight for the corporation's loans.

ORATORY CRACKLES

Washington, Feb. 11—(UP)—Crackling oratory is sharpening the concluding hours of Senate debate over the use of federal funds to care for the destitute unemployed. But so far as Republican leaders will concede, the fiery exchanges have not in the slightest altered the lineup against appropriation of federal funds.

The Senate has not seen this session in such a bitter display of feeling as swept the Republican side yesterday when Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, matched wits and words with Senator Fess Repn., of Ohio.

Fess, in the Senate yesterday was the first speaker to oppose federal relief of any kind. Prone ordinarily to lecture the Senate in the approved schoolmaster manner, he had planned on this occasion to prod no sore spots and hurt no feelings.

But despite good intentions his training got the better of him and he drew from a sociology textbook a description of the "dole" as "inadequate, demoralizing and pauperizing." He suggested that persons who became paupers would not willingly resume self-support.

LEWIS, FRANCE PETITIONS ARE FILED IN STATE

Are Only Ones Filed For Presidential Candidates

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11—(UP)—Candidates of United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis for the Democratic presidential nomination, and Joseph Irwin France, former United States Senator from Maryland, for the Republican presidential nomination, were launched in Illinois today with the filing of petitions of the two candidates with Secretary of State William J. Stratton.

Names of the two candidates will head the Democratic and Republican columns at the primary elections to be held April 12.

Petitions of the candidates were received by Stratton in the mails today. Lewis' petition contained names of six thousand persons, while France's contained the specified three thousand signatures.

No statements accompanied either petition, the Illinois statutes not requiring a presidential candidate seeking expression of the voters at a primary, to declare his candidacy. The law applies only to state officers.

The petitions of Lewis and France are the only ones that had been filed for presidential preferential expression thus far. The time limit for such filings is tomorrow at midnight while the deadline for withdrawal of such candidates is fixed at midnight, Feb. 17.

Wife Of Chicago Doctor Is Accused

Chicago, Feb. 11—(AP)—State's Attorney John A. Swanson today ordered indictments sought against Mrs. Arnold H. Kegel, wife of the former Chicago Health Commissioner, and Gerald Lee, grocery clerk, charging them with attempted murder of a former maid in the Kegel home.

The maid, Mrs. Mary Ryan, is seriously ill from the effects of mercury poisoning.

Dr. Kegel has started suit for divorce, charging that his wife attempted to poison him. Swanson said the state has evidence that poison was administered to Mrs. Ryan, who was to be the chief witness in the divorce suit.

Lee is in custody, and prosecutors said he had made admissions concerning Mrs. Kegel.

CHINESE DRESS SHIPS IN HONOR OF JAP HOLIDAY

Odd Incident Of Informal War Recorded At Shanghai

Shanghai, Feb. 11—(AP)—This strictly informal "war" between China and Japan produced another odd incident today when Chinese government customs boats in the Whangpoo river broke out all their bunting and dressed the ship in honor of Japan's "Empire Day."

All the other foreign warcraft also were dressed, for in the book of naval etiquette failure to recognize another nation's holiday is justifiable only if the celebrating country is not recognized or if there is a state of war.

Tokio, Feb. 11—(AP)—Japan celebrated its Fourth of July today—the national holiday Kigenetsu, with patriotic demonstrations which reflected the martial events of recent weeks in Manchuria and at Shanghai.

Kigenetsu is the day on which the empire celebrates the supposed anniversary of its founding by Jimmu Tenno, a descendant of the Sun Goddess, in 660 B. C. There were parades by several patriotic organizations, in which about 100,000 persons, mostly youths and school girls marched behind blaring bands and the national flag.

On the banners which marchers carried were slogans such as "Be Loyal to the Emperor," "Love Our Country," "Don the Steel Helmet and Protect the Fatherland!" "Courage and Service for Country!"

The parades converged on the great plaza in front of the imperial palace and the paraders bowed in respect to their ruler.

Today's demonstration, however, belonged to a holiday celebration and represented practically the only departure from a dispassionate calm the Japanese have been maintaining despite the presence of many thousands of their warriors on Chinese soil.

UNUSUAL WINTER HEAT WAVE WILL END TONIGHT, WEATHERMAN SAYS

Chicago, Feb. 11—(UP)—It was winter in the midwest today but you had to look at the calendar to be sure of the season.

Thermometers from the Kansas prairies to the Ohio valley spurted to summer levels. Citizens shed heavy clothing. In a few hours last week's snow had disappeared in the roaring gutters. Butterflies appeared and dozens of "first" robins were reported.

Pana, Ill., sweltered at 84 degrees and was the hottest point in the country. St. Louis perspired at 82.

Freak recordings came from nearly every city in the region. Kansas City, Springfield, Ill., Cincinnati, O., and Caro, Ill. had 76. Peoria reported 74 Keokuk Ia., and Indianapolis, 72, and Wichita and Dodge City, Kan., 70.

Chicago with 60 above was within three degrees of the highest ever recorded.

But, by tonight the heat wave will have passed, the startled Weather Bureau predicted, and normal winter weather will return.

ADMIRAL SHIMADA CALLS MANEUVER "TRAGIC ERROR"

Lull In Fighting Today As Japs Celebrate Holiday

BULLETIN
Tokio, Feb. 11—(UP)—Admiral Osumi Minister of Marine, highly disturbed at the bombing of a cotton mill by Japanese planes in Shanghai, today sent an aide to the United States embassy to express formal regrets.

The aide spoke to the American naval attaché, who informed W. Cameron Forbes, Ambassador of the Ministry's action. It was understood Forbes passed on the regrets to Secretary of State Stimson.

American officials appeared confident that Admiral Osumi's explanation that the bombing was a "tragic error" was correct.

BULLETIN

Washington, Feb. 11—(AP)—Evacuation of Americans from danger points in China is meeting with the usual unwillingness to leave homes and property.

More than fifty Americans refused to leave Nanking when Consul General Willis Peck arranged transportation for them. Like the people who live about Vesuvius, foreigners in China refused to believe they are in danger. The men particularly are unwilling to go, but generally send their families outside the trouble zones. Mrs. Peck, the wife of the Consul General, Mrs. W. P. Colman, and many other women who left Nanking have had long experience in China and are not strangers to bursting shells from opposing armies.

BY MORRIS J. HARRIS

Shanghai, China, Friday, Feb. 11—(AP)—Five hundred people were killed in the Shanghai air attack today, perhaps today, before many days have passed. Thursday hostilities were ended because of the celebration of Japan's "Empire Day." Even the new government customs boats in the Whangpoo dressed ship as an international courtesy.

Behind the lines, however, operations were going on which pointed unmistakably to preparation by both sides for a major engagement.

It appeared the Japanese were waiting for the arrival of heavy reinforcements on the way from Japan. The government has carefully withheld information regarding the date on which the transports left and the number of men on the way, but Japanese sources here admitted early today that they were hurrying to finish as quickly as possible their job of driving the Chinese out of the Shanghai area.

Short Truce Arranged
A four-hour truce, from 8 A. M. to noon, to permit foreigners to take non-combatants out of Chapel was arranged by a French priest Thursday as both the Chinese and Japanese continued to dig in for a major engagement along the Chapel-Woosung battle line.

Hostilities in Chapel will come to a halt to permit thirty foreigners bearing white flags to get into the Chinese native city. Under a Japanese escort they will carry out women and children and wounded found trapped in that shell-ton no man's land.

Father Jacquot of Saint Francis Xavier's College, was credited with effecting the truce, the first cessation of hostilities in the zone. It was believed many citizens were still trapped there, survivors of the almost two weeks of constant bombardment.

The French priest lost an arm at Verdun and holds a medal for heroism in that World War engagement.

Prepare For Bloodier War
Save for that one gesture of mercy preparations in the International Settlement and all along the twenty-mile Chapel-Woosung front were for renewed and bloodier hostilities.

United States soldiers of the 31st Infantry moved up into the front line of Settlement defenses Thursday, occupying one of the most strategic sectors along Woosung creek. They relieved three companies of Shanghai Volunteers, one of which was made up of American business men.

Meanwhile sporadic outbursts occurred Thursday both at the Chapel and Woosung ends of the battle zone. Fresh fires were set near the International Settlement by Japanese bombers and the invaders also loosed aerial projectiles on the Chinese airdrome at Junojao, five miles west of Shanghai.

U. S. Marines Near Death
Earlier in the day almost a score of United States Marines narrowly missed death from a Japanese aerial bomb in the International Settlement. The projectile hit a Chinese owned cotton mill on Soochow creek in which the Marines were billeted, killing five Chinese women and children, workers in the mill. None of the Marines was injured.

VAGABOND

THIS is all I ask of Life:
 The earth and open sky
 For my comrades and a roving
 To guide me by.
 —A roving star to lead me on,
 And when I lie
 A wayside spot among the trees
 And a rousing fire.
 —A fire of beechen logs
 To thaw my inmost soul,
 A touch of color and romance
 To make me whole.
 —A splendid flame that blossoms
 To a crimson flower
 And dies to burning embers
 For the soul's deep hour.

Cozad-Piper Wedding Tuesday

Of much interest to friends in this city and many other localities is the news of the marriage of Miss Ruth M. Cozad, daughter of Mrs. Rose Cozad, 2531 Seventh avenue, Rock Island, and the late James M. Cozad, to A. Piper, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Piper of Ohio, Ill.

The Rev. John F. Barrett, assistant rector, performed the ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass. The bride had as her only attendant her sister, Miss Dorothy Cozad, who served as maid of honor. Edward Harding Piper of Ohio attended his brother as best man. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, William M. Normoyle of Rock Island. Morgan Normoyle, cousin of the bride, and William A. Unger, both of Rock Island, were ushers.

A program of nuptial music was played by Mrs. John G. Miller, organist, for a half hour preceding the ceremony. At the appointed hour The Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin was sounded. Herman C. Schnell of Rock Island sang "O Lord I Am Not Worthy" at communion and during the offertory Dale Doran of Ohio, cousin of the bridegroom, sang Rosewig's Ave Maria. Mrs. Miller played Mendelssohn's Wedding March for the recessional.

The bride wore a quaint printed frock in spring shades with blue predominating. Her costume was fashioned colonial style and form-fitting with accessories in powder blue. The honor maid was in a black and white ensemble with matching accessories. The bride and her attendant carried pearl rosaries and prayer books.

Twenty relatives and close friends were guests at the wedding breakfast at the Cozad home. A three-tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom, formed the centerpiece for the bride's table. Crystal candlesticks with tall tapers were used on either side of the centerpiece. All the decorations carried out the bridal colors, pink and green. The Misses Veronica and Viola Caulfield, cousins of the bride, together with members of the bride's bridge club, all of Rock Island, assisted about the rooms.

Mr. Piper and his bride left late this afternoon by motor for a honeymoon trip to New York City and other eastern points. For traveling the bride wore a form-fitting black crepe dress with accessories to match, and a dark brown pony coat. H. Meinberg of St. Ambrose college, Davenport, were other guests present.

Mr. Piper received her education at the Villa de Chantal and has been employed at the publication building of the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Piper was graduated from St. Bede's college at LaSalle, Peru, Ill., and later attended St. Ambrose college for two years.

Upon returning from the wedding trip, the bridegroom's parents until the new home near Ohio is completed.

MAN-MADE DANGERS.

The Cuban earthquake luckily turned out far less severe than early reports indicated. Still it was enough of a catastrophe to underline once more the fact that nature, supposedly "conquered" by inventive men who fly through the air and talk through space, can still be an unpredictable and terrifying source of disaster.

These reminders come every so often; earthquakes, hurricanes, cyclones, landslides, floods and pestilences, striking through the flimsy defenses of civilization and emphasizing mankind's weakness when opposed to uncontrollable natural forces.

These are things that defy calculation and make safeguards look futile. Ten million dollars worth of buildings in Santiago were knocked down in a few minutes; what had been a smiling and peaceful city one moment was a devastated place of terror and confusion the next.

And yet, terrifying as a thing of this kind is, the really frightening part of it all is that such natural calamities are, after all, the very least of mankind's worries nowadays. The earth may be shaky and insecure, and the blue skies may hold death-dealing storms that can be loosed without warning, but the thing that makes pessimists of us is the fact that other dangers compared to which earthquakes and tornadoes are hardly more important than so many pin pricks. And these greater dangers are dangers we have created for ourselves.

We are, these days, more or less in Kublai Khan's position; we hear ancestral voices prophesying war, to say nothing of other dire possibilities such as revolution, economic breakdown and a general collapse of civilization; and we do not seem more able to cope with these dangers than we do with the dangers of future earthquakes.

Yet they are dangers that we ourselves have brought into existence. They do not come from obscure natural forces that are beyond control; they come from things that we have done and are doing. Living in a world whose inanimate forces demand our best thought and our greatest energy, we have somehow raised other problems for ourselves that are infinitely greater.

THE FIRST AUTO.

A New England newspaperman, examining old newspaper files the other day, discovered that one Joseph Manton, of Providence, actually invented an automobile as long ago as 1866; a steam-driven car that was crude, cumbersome and awkward, but that managed, nevertheless, to accomplish a fairly lengthy cross-country road trip without mishap.

Manton, the files related, was highly proud of his contrivance, but he saw no commercial possibilities in it and eventually stored his car and gave up the idea.

Before the great development of the auto could be possible, the internal combustion engine had to be invented. And yet—suppose that Manton's car had caught the imagination of science and industry, so that the research and experimentation that ultimately perfected the gasoline motor could have been applied to the small steam engine; would we, today, be driving steam cars?

FROM DRY TO WET.

Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, formerly a dry, is going to run for re-election as a wet; that is, his platform urges modification of the Volstead Act and calls for a referendum on the Eighteenth Amendment.

The various wet and dry leaders can be left to argue about the significance of this conversion; meanwhile, the general question of statesmen who change their convictions overnight deserves a little consideration.

It is perfectly plausible, of course, to argue that a statesman ought to be a mouthpiece for his constituents, and that he is obliged to adopt new policies if he is convinced that the majority of his constituents wants him to. But there used to be a theory that a statesman should be a leader; that he should tell the voters, "This is my stand, and if you don't like it you must elect someone else."

Sentiment is worse than facts.—Albert H. Wiggin, New York Banker.

Why do you send me away for only six weeks? Give me the same sentence you give my sisters.—Mrs. Gandhi.

You can say, however, that I didn't buy a silk hat.—Huey P. Long, Governor and Senator-elect of Louisiana.

We cannot silently watch the annihilation of our marines.—Foreign Minister Yoshizawa of Japan.

In America I am not a legend. I am a god. They worship me.—George Bernard Shaw, British Writer.

Why, instead of giving me the "jitters," Reno has given me the "calmers."—Mrs. Nancy Hoyt Curtis, author and eastern society figure.

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The old man with the hobby horse exclaimed, "Well, little lads, of course if you are too tired out to walk I can think up a plan. Just let me think a moment now. I'll see if I can figure how to make things easy for you. I am quite a smart old man."

The Tinymites agreed that he was being kind as kind could be. They all kept very quiet while the old man scratched his head. At last he very loudly cried, "I have it, boys! You all can ride my hobby horse."

"Oh, thank you, sir," we Scouty promptly said. "But, are you sure your horse won't mind? When we climb on, you see, he'll find that we are rather heavy. He may toss us to the ground. I think I'll drive him round a bit, until I'm sure he's feeling fit and then, perhaps he'll take us to the place where we are bound."

The man replied, "Your plan's all right. Be sure, though, that you hang on tight." Then Scouty climbed aboard the horse and shouted, "Well, let's go!" The horse raked down a narrow track, then turned around and came right back. It stopped before the Tinymites when Scouty cried out, "Whoa!"

"All right, now, youngsters, take your time and be real careful when you climb aboard the horse," the old man said. "We're ready for you on your way. We ought to reach my place today. Be careful how you steer the horse and please don't let him slip."

They all were sitting safe at last. The horse then started gong fast and very soon the kind old man was left far in the rear. He shouted, "Hey there, please don't run so fast. This really isn't fun. Pull up the reins there, Scouty. Make him slow down. Can't you hear?"

WILSON'S REPLY

On Feb. 11, 1918, President Wilson replied to the speeches of Chancellor von Hertling of Germany and Count Czernin of Austria-Hungary in an address before Congress, setting forth his four requirements for peace.

First—Each part of the final settlement must be based upon the essential justice of that particular case and upon such adjustments as are most likely to bring a peace that will be permanent.

Second—Peoples and provinces are not to be bartered.

Third—Every territorial settlement involved in this war must be made in the interest and for the benefit of the populations concerned.

Fourth—All well-defined national aspirations shall be accorded the utmost satisfaction that can be accorded them without introducing new or perpetuating old elements of discord.

On this date also the Bolsheviks declared war at an end with the Central Powers, and Russian troops were ordered demobilized.

Woman Claimant Of Iodine Egg Honors

Budapest.—(UP)—The race, supposedly exclusively between American and German scientists, to produce an egg containing a large amount of iodine, apparently has been won by a rank outsider, Mrs. M. Janosi, a poultry farmer, living near Budapest.

It is claimed that iodine can be far more easily assimilated by the human system if the iodine is contained in eggs, than when the drug is administered direct.

Mrs. Janosi claims to have succeeded in producing eggs which contain 0.169 milligrams of iodine without any unusual taste being perceptible. Her purported achievement is regarded as of great importance. If proven, it would provide iodine egg-nogs, and persons who have hitherto been unable to digest iodine might assimilate it without discomfort.

"I Will Arise and Go to My Father"

(Read Psalm 32.)

It is not easy for anyone to take the first step back toward God. Pride interferes. Habits interfere. Yet, we know that we must take that step or perish. So let us make a definite break with all our miserable doubts and with all our mental reservations. Let us endure this separation no longer. Let us end this self-imposed banishment from the only Light that can illuminate our soul's darkness. Have we lost all of our capacity for action? Has our faith all but disappeared? No. We will arise and go to our Father. There is nothing else left for us to do.

Prayer: O God, we would have sold ourselves into slavery, choosing the way of selfishness in the service of mammon. We would have made our bed in hell, seeking to please our senses. But Thou hast saved us from ourselves and hast stirred again in us the desire for Thee. We come, O God, to Thee. We ask nothing save that we may live once more in Thy Light, Father, wilt Thou now receive us if we come? In deep humility and in contrition, we pray that Thou wilt receive us. Amen.

Every college boy and girl would appreciate a box of our stationery—with name and address printed in blue ink, 200 sheets and 100 envelopes postpaid for $.90. B. F. Shaw Print Co., Dixon, Ill.

Mrs. Clifford G. Archer of Dixon, well known here as a patient at the hospital at Dixon with a fractured pelvic bone, due to an automobile accident. Mr. and Mrs. Archer were returning in their Chevrolet coach Friday evening from a supper at the Masonic Temple, in Dixon, and were bumped into by another car that was coming out of an alley. Their car was damaged a little. Mr. Archer was able to get out the accident uninjured. Mrs. Archer will be confined for at least four weeks.

Poor Marcella

A Story of Persistent Love

By FANNIE HURST

(By the author's permission syndicated by the WNU Service)

WHEN she was eighteen, the only child of the Honorable Festus Martin had been painted by Delmar, presented at the court of St. James and introduced with formality to the official social life of Washington.

It was a quick transition from the busy, unremarkable life of Marcella Martin's childhood, as daughter of a prosperous manufacturer of radio parts, to the highly complex social life achieved by Festus Martin after his growing wealth had enabled him to foster political ambitions, and after these ambitions had landed him in congress.

Undoubtedly it was the combination of Marcella's estate of only child, combined with the dotting ambition of parents who could have loved her more wisely, which was accountable for the six years of rigid social disciplining which were imposed upon the protesting Marcella.

It was said of the Martins, laughingly, in certain Washington circles, that the adoring parents of this girl had actually succeeded in making over her face. A rather plain face, too long, with overhanging brow and dull brown hair entirely lacking in lights. But so often had this and that artist idealized it, and so long and ardently had schools of massage, dentistry and hair-dressing, expended skill in improving it, that by the time she was eighteen, Marcella was indeed quite an improvement upon the lank, listless little girl of other days.

It can readily be imagined that the Martins spared neither time nor the most elaborate expenditures to launch successfully into an estate befitting her father's rank this idolized and only daughter.

This fact that she was different, frankly unsocial, unimpressed by wealth or station, unambitious along lines assiduously mapped out for her by her parents whose dreams of ultimate highest realization lay in this girl, only conspired to urge the elder Martins to maximum effort.

"Why, Marcella, another girl with your opportunities would be in her seventh heaven of delight. Doesn't it mean anything to you to have all the things your father's wealth and position can afford for you?"

"Of course it does, mother, only I want them my way. I'm no good at this social-round kind of thing. I don't like it chiefly, I guess, because I'm a failure at it. Don't force, mother. Can't you reconcile yourself to the fact that I'm not what you want me to be?"

No, neither of the parental Martins could. Festus Martin, as much as his more obvious wife, wanted this daughter a fitting complement to his achievements both official and social. His wife was that. A pretty, pampered-looking woman with small eager ways and deep gold eyes that were brighter than, if not as profound, as her daughter's.

"Emma," he confided to her once during one of their frequent controversies about this problem of their girl, "I actually believe you still have more youth and social charm than Marcella. What is it all this child? She's as fine a girl as you meet in a thousand years, and yet—and yet—no two ways about it—something's missing."

"It's her own fault, Festus. Marcella's heart isn't in living the life about her. That's what hurts me." Marcella's reaction to these implications of her dotting parents was emotional and deeply sincere.

"Dears, don't you think it hurts me as much as it hurts you that I don't seem to live up to what you want of me? If only you could make up your minds that you're trying to make a silk purse out of—"

"Marcella Martin, nothing of the sort. You've ten times the sense and intelligence of the girls you compete with. Why, a man like Senator Morris wouldn't look at the swarms of silly girls who buzz around him, if you so much as took the trouble to exert yourself to interest him. That's what troubles us, dear. You have all the opportunities for success, including some very natural qualities of your own, and you won't use them."

The subject of Senator Morris was a mooted one in the Martin household. It seemed fitting to the parents of Marcella that the most eligible bachelor in Washington, one of the most outstanding members of the upper house, a man with much achievement behind him and obviously again as much ahead, should be potential timber for Marcella. After all, the only child of a millionaire many times over, personable, probably the most all round educated young woman in the capital, traveled, informed and by no means without a certain quality of distinction, had the right to meet her eyes high.

"Anyway, the Martins felt that way about it, and spared neither time, effort nor expense to the bringing together of these two.

It must be admitted, however, that so somewhat ingenious and not all news of the world. The best paper in this part of the state.

ways skillful efforts met with little success.

It is doubtful if in all the times he met Marcella, both in the Martin home and at public occasions, the beautifully gowned, jeweled, caparisoned little lady of longish face, bulging brow, deeply intent eyes and clear brown skin, ever more than passingly snagged his attention. Oh, yes, his reaction, if any, might have been: Martin's daughter! Said to be clever; but a solemn young lady with that dark brown look. Good enough fellow, Martin, if he knew enough to keep out of politics. Pretty little wife with soapuds for brains.

Marcella's reaction, secret as her own secretive-looking eyes, were not in line with the senator's. There resided in the makeup of this aggressive, massive-jawed, rough-haired member of the liberal wing of politics, qualities that were stirring within Marcella keen, new and exciting thrills.

The most interesting man in all Washington, the most interesting man in America, the most interesting man she had ever met, was the senator. Secret as were these deep-seated emotions, and imperturbable as her own brown eyes continued to remain, that fact grew with the months. Secretly, Marcella was in love with Senator Morris.

That it was unrequited caused her neither bitterness nor undue pain. One just went on—alone—caring—hoping for the glimpse of him here and there, picking up crumbs of information of his comings and goings, and outwardly reconciled to defeat.

After a while even the Martins became half reconciled to it. At twenty-four, Marcella simply had not made her dent. Her generation of debutantes had come and gone. Practically all of the girls who had made their bows the winter that the Marcella Martin coming-out ball was the crowning event of an eventful social season, were married now—rightly.

At twenty-five something latent in Marcella rose and asserted itself. Against the resistance of her parents, which she wore down with a highhandedness uncharacteristic of her, she enrolled in a school of social research, and after two winters of intensive work became allied with a settlement house in New York known as Mulberry Center.

Then began the happiest, most interesting years of her life. When she was twenty-eight, Marcella was first assistant head of this large institution and an outstanding figure in her chosen field.

The Martins, in their way, were proud of her success. Of course it was miles and miles removed from what had been their dreams for her, but, well, it takes all kinds of people to make a world. Poor Marcella. Of course, one appreciated her brains and her distinction, but just the same, the heart of the mother of this daughter seemed to beat to the rhythm: poor Marcella.

It was when she was thirty-two, considerably heavier, and with streaks of faint gray in her strong dark hair, that Marcella Martin, appointed by her government as the first woman member of an international conference on housing conditions to be held in Geneva, again encountered Edgar Morris, now Governor Morris. He, too, gray now, heavier now, found himself sitting beside her at a political luncheon at Geneva where he was in attendance at a conference.

Life, tides, affairs, had flowed swiftly for him in the years which had intervened since his previous meeting with her. It is doubtful if he recalled her at all. He only knew that suddenly he was meeting a woman whose talk, whose point of view, whose deeply quiet eyes and a certain unworldliness, were giving him the first serious pause he had ever in his life felt where the other sex was concerned.

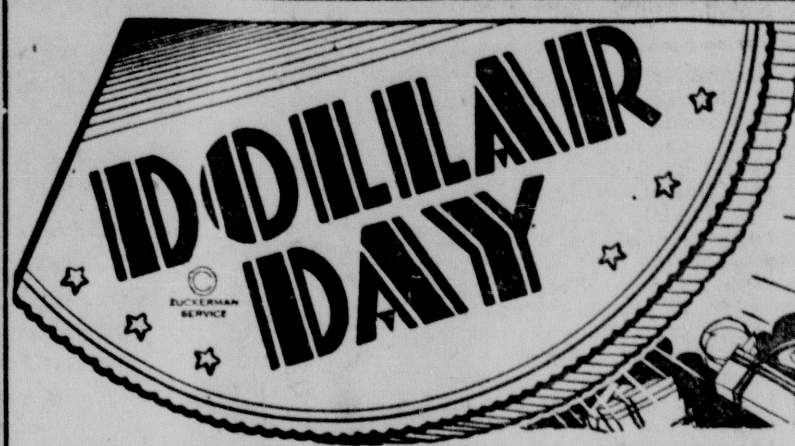

It occurred to him even, as he sat there beside her in the first hour of that lunch in Geneva, that he seemed to be developing symptoms of a man on the verge of falling in love.

Strong Bond Between George V and Scotland

When the lord provost handed to King George the keys of Edinburgh, the ceremonial required his majesty to say, in returning them, that the key could not be in "better hands." The British rulers were celebrating the thirty-eighth anniversary of their wedding in Edinburgh. This was fitting, because it is due to two weddings that the keys of the city were handed to them at all.

If the Tudor princess had not married a king of Scotland, James VI of that country could never have been Elizabeth's successor under the title of James I of the United Kingdom, of Ireland, and the Dominions Beyond the Seas. And if his daughter had not married the elector palatine the house of Hanover, from which George V is more directly descended, could not have come to the British throne after the death of Queen Anne.

Because of their marriages George V bears the blended blood of the royal house of England and Scotland. His Plantagenet ancestors (through John of Gaunt) were repeatedly chased out of Scotland. His Tudor ancestors didn't dare try to conquer the braw ilk of Caledon. His Stuart ancestors were the Scots' well-beloved. Because of that strain they forgive him his Hanoverian blood.—New York Times.

CHICAGO DIVINE BEGINS LENTEN SERVICES HERE

Splendid Audience At The
M. E. Church Heard
Dr. A. W. Palmer

A splendid audience greeted Dr. Albert W. Palmer last night at the opening of the pre-lenten services. Rev. Gilbert Stansell presided and the Rev. Paul Gordon led in prayer. The choir under the splendid leadership of Mrs. Bertha Rorick sang the beautiful anthem, "How Beautiful upon the Mountains." The scripture lesson was taken from the 129th Psalm, and then Dr. Palmer spoke on: "The Inevitable God and the God We Choose." He said:

"The Psalmist in this Psalm is very pathetic and wistful and his message brings comfort, help and light to many, but in this wonderful age in which we live and in this expanded universe there are many who are wistful about God. What they need is a new sense of reality of the need of God. On Edison's eightieth birthday the reporters put some questions to him in writing, one of them was: 'What does the word God mean to you?' His answer was 'the word God means nothing to me but I do believe there is a supreme intelligence pervading the universe.' We find Him in the study of mathematics in fact one great British scientist thinks of God as a mathematician. In the world of chemistry and physics we find a great unifying power perfectly marvelous, uniformly obeyed, all pervasive, dependable and mysterious underlying it all. In the world of biology we find the Yucca plant with its interesting friend the white moth which lays its eggs in the pods and yet leaves other pods untouched, she never sees her young again, hers is an unconscious motherhood and she has no knowledge to impart, yet her young when grown do the very same thing. In the world of physiology my life is not entirely my own, within this body is a resident power and wisdom. There is not at the center of things a blind impersonal force but a wondrous personality with a marvelous capacity for love. You may analyze a cupful of the Pacific Ocean but that can give you no conception of the depths of its wondrous depths or the great storms that lash it into fury. When I lived in California I started out to climb Mt. St. Helena with a companion. The colic dog was anxious to come with us and climbing the mountain men and dog had parallel experience. We all enjoyed the climb, we all shared in the water but when I took out my map and compasses to look for Mt. Shasta the dog sniffed them and went off to hunt for a rabbit. We had come to a new level which was above the dog level. There is a power that makes for righteousness and reality and personality are inescapable conclusions. If you choose righteousness you will find a parallel in the life of Abraham Lincoln. The beginning of his religious experience seems to have been in his speech at the Cooper Union when he said 'Let us have faith that right makes might.' There is no doubt that his religious faith and prayer and relationship to God began there. A girl said to Lorado Taft will you please come and show my people the sunset, he answered 'they live higher up the hill, and surely they can see it better than I.' Oh! she said, 'I never really saw the sunset until I came to live with you.' Worship is a reaching out to God. Caruth, the poet says 'some of us call it longing and others call it God.' There is something in every unconverted soul that calls out for God and the real supremacy of worship is seen in the choosing of Jesus who is the most perfect interpretation of God and human life. Let us choose Jesus. Dr. Palmer will speak again this evening at 7:30. Dr. L. W. Walter will preside.

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Text: John 9:1-11, 30-38
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Feb. 14.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

As we have seen in the miraculous feeding of the multitude a symbol of the spiritual food which never fails but increases the more it is shared, so in the miracle of this lesson, the restoration of sight to a man blind from his birth, there is a symbolism of the spiritual fact of Jesus Christ as the bringer and giver of light. Through him not only blind eyes but blind minds and blind hearts receive spiritual vision.

The story is one of the most colorful and interesting in the New Testament. In narrative interest it is striking, but it has also a deeper significance in the reality with which it portrays what has again and again happened in the treatment of its spiritual leaders.

The disciples were interested in the blind man not from the standpoint of sympathy, nor from the standpoint of the possible help they could give him, but from the standpoint of speculation as to what part sin had to do with his blindness. Like all speculations run wild, their very question indicated its foolishness. "Master," they asked, "who did sin, this man or his parents that he was born blind?" How could the man have been responsible for his own blindness, unless there was the implication that he had lived in a previous state of existence?

"That the sin of his parents might have been responsible for his blindness," Jesus answered.

Illinois Chamber Protests "Doles"

Chicago—An urgent protest against Federal relief and particularly against the LaFollette-Costigan bill has been voiced by C. G. Ferris, executive vice-president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, in a communication to the State's senatorial representation in Washington as follows:

"The prominence now being given in the public press to the debate on the LaFollette-Costigan Bill in favor of Federal relief leads me to transmit to you the opinion of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce on this measure. In our judgment the states and local communities are able, even under these trying conditions, to largely handle their own problems.

"As you are aware, our State Legislature in special session has just passed emergency enactments which in effect will make $20,000,000 available for relief not only in Cook County but throughout the State. While in principle we are opposed to Government, either State or Federal launching a policy which is in effect an endorsement of the dole system, we realize that in emergencies the states may be warranted in coming to the rescue temporarily.

"However, there is no necessity for the Federal Government to adopt the policy of the LaFollette-Costigan Bill, in our judgment. If such legislation were enacted by the Government, the gates would be down and there would be no end to the demand. Furthermore, it would practically ruin the ability of local communities and even states to raise local funds for relief. If the states find it necessary in unusual emergencies to supplement private relief by temporary assistance, well and good. We cannot let people starve to death but let us keep the Federal Government out of it."

BOOMS MARRIAGES

Kelso, Wash.—(UP)—Leap year is making an excellent showing in Cowlitz County, a survey of marriage license records reveals. The number of marriages for the first 18 days is double that of last year.

Rescues Wax Exciting in Museum Fire

"Women first!" was the slogan of New York firemen who performed heroic rescues when a fire swept a building at Coney Island. Here you see one of the thrilling scenes, but the figure perched so unyieldingly on the fireman's shoulder is only a wax effigy of a once-notorious murderer. Meanwhile kings, presidents, and other historical celebrities—wax exhibits in the Eden Muses—ran all over the place and perished by the score.

Sidelights In News In Capital Of United States

BY UNITED PRESS

Washington, Feb. 11.—The history of most well-seasoned countries is interwoven with the annals of its prominent families. America now is reaching the age where some of its clans can trace historical events through family memories.

Three quarters of a century ago Commodore Perry opened Japan to western trade. When Mrs. Joseph Clark Grew reaches Tokio with her husband, whom President Hoover has named Ambassador to Japan, a cycle of family history will be completed. For the Commodore was her grandfather.

Old memories, too, will be awakened in the mind of the Ambassador in Tokio. There he will find as his British colleague, Sir Ronald Lindsey. The two began their diplomatic careers together nearly three decades ago in Cairo, Egypt.

Grew, incidentally, is one of the most interesting and colorful figures in modern diplomacy. Massive, calm in judgment, he has moved through a life filled with international conferences, on one extreme, and such adventurous sports as big-game hunting and skiing on the other.

It was just 30 years ago that Grew finished Harvard and started out to see the world. He wound up presently in China where he was enjoying the mild sport of tiger-stalking. Taken ill of a fever, he was nursed to health by an American Consul who interested him in the diplomatic service. Since 1927 he has been Ambassador to Turkey.

Interspersed among the years Grew has spent in the world's capitals were several years of service in the State department. From 1924 to 1927 he was Undersecretary of State. Once he was chairman of the Foreign Service Personnel Board—and thereby hangs a tale.

Grew was examining a hopeful but agitated candidate for the foreign service.

"What is nitrate?" he asked. "The young man shifted his feet and looked at the ceiling. Grew thought he had not understood the question."

"What is nitrate?" he repeated. "I don't exactly know," the boy stammered, "but I think they are cheaper than day rates."

Bright Spots In World Of Business

BY UNITED PRESS

New York, Feb. 10.—(UP)—New York Telephone Co. will spend $76,000,000 on plant additions betterments and replacements during 1932.

Pittsburgh—American Sheet & Tin Plate Co. will resume operations Monday at 17 mills in Monessen, Pa., re-employing about 300 tin plate workers, it was announced.

Kearney N. J.—Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., reported earning for 1931 were equal to 90 cents a share on the common stock, against eight cents a share in 1930.

Reno, Nev.—Sales of Safeway Stores, Inc. for the four weeks to Jan. 30 totaled $18,560,312, against $15,660,384 in the corresponding period of 1930, the general office reported.

Chicago—Indications of a gradual improvement in business as gauged by carloading figures, were seen by F. W. Sargent, President of the Chicago & North Western System.

Amsterdam, N. Y.—Mohawk carpet mills reported for 1931 a net operating profit of $310,673, compared with a $600,000 operating loss in 1930.

Berkeley, Cal.—(UP)—These hard times are costing the very life blood of 60 University of California students. Recent infirmity reports showed that that number was working through school by sale of blood for transfusions.

Twice As Many Male Ducks As Females Shown

Washington—The popular belief among waterfowl shooters that male wild ducks today far outnumber the females has been given startling support by an analysis just made of duck banding records in the files of the U. S. Biological Survey.

Reports on 40,904 ducks of 10 well-known species, trapped and banded at 50 widely-distributed migratory banding stations over the country in the past few years, were studied by Dr. Frederick C. Lincoln, waterfowl authority of the Survey. Dr. Lincoln informed the American Game Association that the figures indicated a more than two to one proportion of sexes in favor of the males.

Photographs recently taken from the air by army fliers, under Dr. Lincoln's direction, of large flocks of ducks on the waters around Washington, also indicate a large preponderance of males over female ducks, he said.

No conclusions as to the cause of this condition or as to complete proof of the situation can be given at this time, the expert declared. He has recommended an exhaustive investigation, both in the field and at game farms where wild ducks are raised in captivity.

"If a preponderance of males over females is a fact as indicated in banding records and reports of sportsmen, it means that the potential ability of wild ducks to increase their numbers is not nearly so great as the present apparent number of ducks would lead one to believe," he said. "Any estimate of future crops of ducks must be based on the number of females."

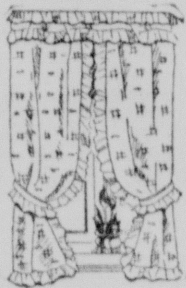

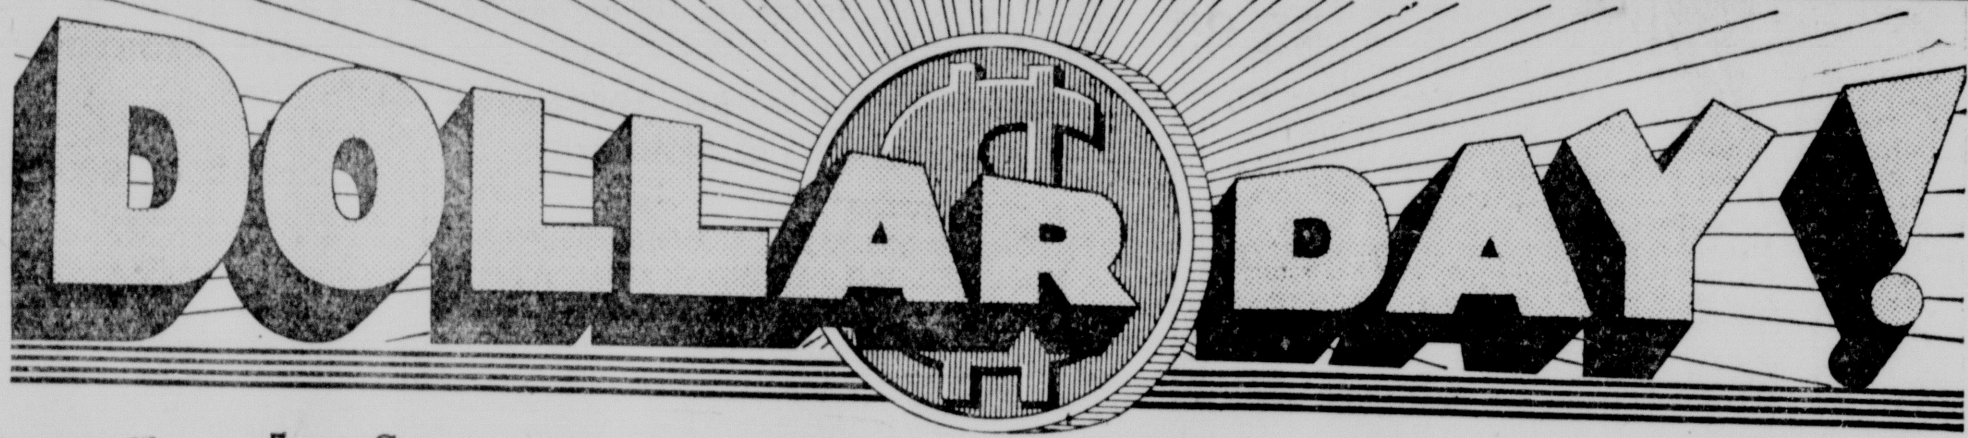

He declared that the indicated minority of females can not be blamed upon shooting, since male ducks are known to make up the largest part of the average game bag. He believes the banding figures are a true indication because as a general rule male birds are more wary of traps than are the females. Birds are banded to determine their flight ranges.

WHITE RATS HAVE MANNERS

Madison, Wis.—(UP)—White rats have table manners, and eat more in company than alone, Prof. Harry F. Harlow, University of Wisconsin psychologist, discovered in his research. The baboon is likely to bite his mate if she interferes with his eating, Harlow explained.

PRESIDENT HOOVER TO SPEAK FROM MT. VERNON

President Hoover and Governor John Garland Pollard of Virginia will head a pilgrimage of twenty-five thousand persons to George Washington's Mount Vernon home on Monday, February 22 to attend ceremonies which will be broadcast over an NBC-WJZ network at 2 p. m., C. S. T.

This marks the first time that microphones will have been installed in the home. The National Broadcasting Company received permission to make the installation from the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union, through Mrs. Alice H. Reynolds, Union regent.

Colonel Harrison H. Dodge, superintendent of the Union, will be in charge of the broadcast. Arrangements were made by the Virginia State Commission for the celebration of the Washington Bi-Centennial, of which Gov. Pollard is chairman.

The program is to be conducted under the auspices of the National Education Association, and is arranged as an inspiration to American school children.

NOTED MILITARY MEN

SPEAK ON AMERICANISM

The National Security League, of which Major-General Robert Lee Bullard, U. S. Army, retired, is president, will inaugurate a series of weekly programs, on which military and naval men of note will appear, beginning Saturday February 13, over an NBC-WJZ network at 1 p. m., central standard time.

Rear-Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, retired, will be the first speaker, having as his subject, "The Navy." Admiral Fiske, a great inventive genius, is responsible for the electric range finder, a method of electric communications between ships, and a system of exploding torpedoes under ships. He was cited by Admiral Dewey.

Brigadier-General Palmer E. Pierce, who will speak on February 20 on "The Army—the Upkeep of National Defense," received the distinguished service medal for his work in France during the great war. He is president of the U. S. Military Academy's Graduate Association, and at one time taught philosophy at West Point.

The League's platform for National Defense is as follows: "The maintenance in accordance with laws and treaties of the Army and Navy in all branches, and strength adequate for the security of the nation and the protection of its rights."

TO DEBATE "DOLE"

A debate, "Should the Federal Government Advance Funds to the States and Other Political Subdivisions to Relieve the Present Unemployment Situation?" will be held in the Institute of Public Affairs of the Columbia Broadcasting System from 10 to 10:30 P. M., EST., Saturday, February 13.

Senator Edward P. Costigan, Democrat, of Colorado, co-author of the Costigan-La Follette bill to appropriate $375,000,000 to the states for unemployment relief, will present the affirmative. Senator Otis F. Glenn, Republican, of Illinois, will state the negative administration view on this specific proposal.

The debate will be held in Columbia's Washington studios, the participants dividing time on a network of more than 70 stations, the number of stations indicating their

UNDERSTANDS NOW
WHY SO MANY
LAUD GLY-CAS

Lady's Whole System Had Been Disordered for 20 Years; Gly-Cas Conquers Stubborn Case.

A surprising statement seeming undoubtedly to prove the unusual efficacy of Gly-Cas, was made recently by Mrs. E. J. Mills, 1701 Callahan St., Muskogee, Oklahoma, who said:

MRS. E. J. MILLS

"Gly-Cas is one medicine that is different and its action is wonderful. My whole system had been disordered for 20 years. I was bothered with constipation, my stomach out of order, food soured, bloated dreadfully. My kidneys and bladder cause me to get up many times during the night, feet swelled badly. Neuritis also settled in my neck and shoulders, pained, and I was in an awful condition until Gly-Cas came to my rescue, restored my health in six weeks time and now I feel better than I have in years. My stomach, kidneys and bowels are regulated and that dreadful neuritis has been taken out of my body entirely. Gly-Cas is one medicine that is deserving of all the praise given it and more too."

Gly-Cas is sold by Schildberg's Pharmacy, Campbell's White Cross Drug Store, and by all leading drug stores in surrounding towns.

intention to broadcast the Columbia Institute of Public Affairs being the largest for any regular sustaining feature on the air.

Senator Costigan and other senatorial proponents of his measure do not consider it a "dole bill." Senator Glenn, like other Administration spokesmen, considers the measure a dole or the beginning of the dole system in the form opposed by President Hoover. The measure is now under consideration in the Senate and may be voted upon before the debate, but the issue will then be before the House, more virulent than ever. It is expected that by Saturday, debate time, interest in the question will be at its height throughout the country, and particularly to the millions of unemployed.

Sixty-eight stations, including two short-wave outlets, already have arranged to broadcast the Institute of Public Affairs programs. It is expected that more stations will join the network before Saturday, bringing the total to well over 70 stations. WGN is scheduled for the program on February 13.

State's Attorney
To Answer Charge

Chicago, Feb. 10 (AP)—Judge Philip L. Sullivan refused today to quash contempt proceedings against State's Attorney John A. Swanson, John E. Northup and his assistants in the Sanitary District graft prosecution.

The contempt action grew out of the concealment of Timothy Connolly, who was in the company of an Assistant State's Attorney after his return from California for trial. Northup denied he had custody of Connolly when a habeas corpus writ for the prisoner.

Judge Sullivan ordered the defendants to answer the contempt citation February 23.

CORRESPONDENT WRITES OF TRIP TO SHELL TOWN

Found It Hard To Realize War Was Under Way Near Shanghai

By D. C. BESS

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
(Copyright, 1932, by United Press.)
Shanghai, Feb. 11.—(UP)—I returned yesterday from a trip to the Woosung front where the week-old battle fought in the air, on land and water had reached a momentary lull. Japanese merely sniping at each other over the shell scarred countryside.

Standing beside Woosung creek, a tiny stream running between the village and the fortress, I watched the Chinese riflemen lean and alert in their grey uniforms, slipping from one ruined building to another in the devastated village 200 feet distant.

Red-tipped, brown khaki clad Japanese soldiers at my side watched for an opportunity to pick off the slinking Chinese.

The village, a tiny fishing town on the Whangpoo river flats, had been taken several times during the several days of fighting. Just now during the lull, Japanese systematically prepared to try again on a larger scale.

There was a curious silence while I was at the village, within the Japanese lines, neither the Japanese nor Chinese making a sound, although all were on the alert to open fire.

The repeated Japanese naval bombardments have wrecked nearly every building in the village. The ruins provided a perfect screen for Chinese sharpshooters. They have repelled all Japanese efforts to bridge Woosung creek, still impassable.

I made the trip down to the Japanese front lines at Woosung in a Chinese-owned automobile with a Chinese chauffeur. I had no trouble at any time and drove without a flag of any sort through the green countryside.

The trip to Woosung took about 45 minutes from the Cathay hotel in the heart of the International Settlement on the water front in the city of Shanghai.

I drove past numerous Japanese sentries on the highway. Some were stationed in farmers' huts. They never stopped me once. I was not asked to show my Japanese permit to go through their lines.

All along were signs of the Japanese preparations for a new offensive, or a "real war."

Just outside the Settlement, I passed a temporary Japanese airplane landing field where nine new bombing planes and nine scouting planes were being tuned up.

Japanese Marines were busy digging entrenchments for anti-aircraft guns.

Farmers At Work
Fifteen minutes later, I passed Chinese farms where women in the coarse blue "cocle cloth" coats and trousers of the peasants were working in the fields. Japanese troops patrolled the road nearby.

I left the car with my nonchalant Chinese chauffeur and strolled unhindered through the Woosung railway repair shops a mile or two above the village toward Shanghai. They were being used as the infantry headquarters for hundreds of Japanese soldiers busily arranging their new billets.

Two companies maneuvered in a nearby field. Their signal corps strung telephone wires from two crumpled moored off shore. In the Whangpoo river 300 yards distant, Japanese cavalrymen were grooming about 200 long-legged Australian horses, apparently to be used in the impending attack.

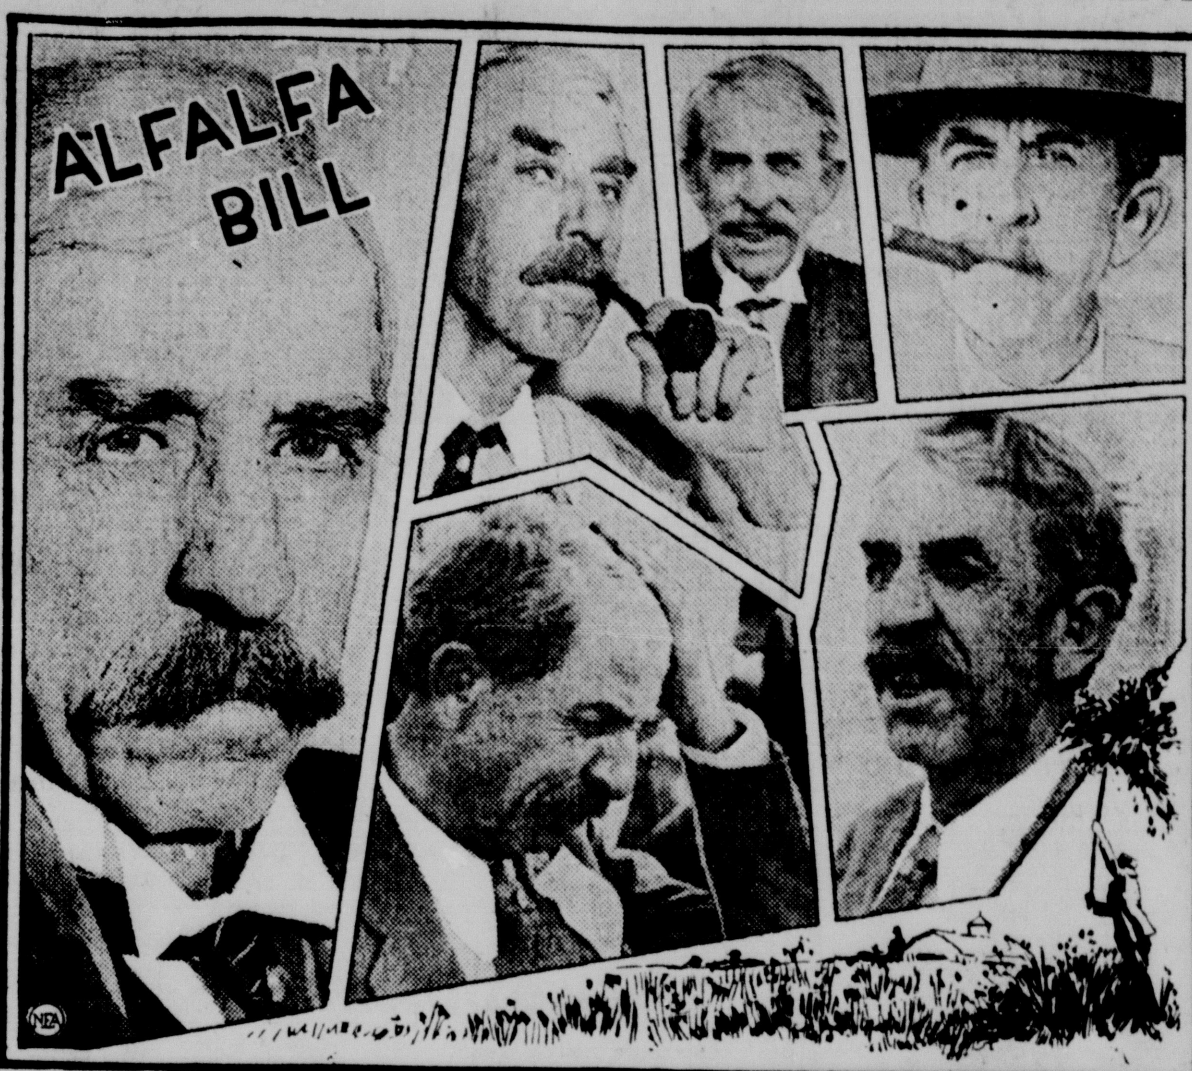

Nobody paid the slightest attention to us. We went everywhere and saw everything.

Five minutes later the road ahead was ruined by shell fire which smashed trees on either side of the highway, blocking the car. Again I got out, the chauffeur remaining this time with his machine, but uncomplaining.

Saw Dead Soldiers
I proceeded on foot along the road to Woosung creek. Several dead Chinese soldiers lay along the railway tracks. In a field one blue clad Chinese farmer lay where he had fallen.

Everything was so quiet I failed to realize this was the actual war "front."

AND NOW OKLAHOMA'S ALFALFA FIELDS OFFER US— A HOMESPUN CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT

William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, mustachioed governor of Oklahoma, who is expected to announce his candidacy for president in the near future, is shown here in six characteristic facial studies. "Alfalfa Bill" plans to toss his hat into the ring at the Oklahoma state Democratic convention, Feb. 20, but he may make the announcement when he goes to his birthplace at Collinsville, Texas, for a celebration, Feb. 18.

Woosung, the boom of the guns reverberating across the countryside. But these farmers, apparently hardened to the firing, went about their tasks.

Re-entering the modern paved streets of the International Settlement, a half hour or so later—we wasted no time on the return trip—it was hard to realize men were killing each other nearby under sunlit skies.

Elks Are United To Aid Recovery

New York, Feb. 11.—Over 700,000 members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in the United States have been summoned to a united effort to hasten economic recovery.

In a special manifesto addressed to approximately 1,600 Elk Lodges located in every state of the union, Grand Exalted Ruler John R. Coen called upon all departments of the Order to "mobilize our resources of men and money, with all the power of patriotism and confidence that is in us," to fight the depression.

Declaring that the present situation "is an emergency as great as war," the Grand Exalted Ruler said, "America's greatest fraternity must meet this emergency as we meet war. The time has come for every Elk in America to manifest his confidence in the United States, and to sell his neighbor on confidence. The Elks can be the moving spirit in every community in organizing a cooperative effort of all of our citizens with the single object of victory in fighting a conquerable depression."

The manifesto, which is made public in the February issue of The Elks Magazine, sets forth that the United States has passed through numerous difficult periods in its history and that this is "another of the periods which try men's souls."

"On indisputable economic truth stands out in all this fog and confusion. The United States is still the richest country in the world and money in the savings banks has reached an unprecedented peak. We seem to be poor because we are afraid."

"Let us not make the great mistake of assuming that all help must come from the top, that the President, or Congress, or the state government, or city government must get us out of this situation. . . . It is a custom to blame economic depression on everybody and everything but ourselves as individuals. Let us start this job at home."

Extraordinary meetings of the 1600 lodges have been called to lay immediate plans for local campaigns in all sections of the country, according to The Elks Magazine.

Many Home Gardens Planned For Year

Chicago.—More home gardens are being planned by the American people for raising their own vegetables this year than ever before in history, according to R. H. Shumway, seed authority of Rockford, in an address here.

"Home owners and renters in all parts of the country already are making preparations to utilize their back yards and vacant property for vegetable raising, to cut down living expenses during the spring and summer."

Mr. Shumway said, "From present indications, more people will have their own vegetable gardens than during the World War days of 1917-18, which established a record."

Ex-Sweetheart---By Elsie Janis

PROVING THAT LOVE AND WAR NEEDN'T GO TOGETHER

WHEN ELSIE WON HEART OF A. E. F.

By ELSIE JANIS

Since I threw my "Tin Lid" into the matrimonial ring a few weeks ago I have been asked many times how I ever escaped Romance in the War? How could anyone be called the Sweetheart of the A. E. F. and spend several months surrounded by thousands of attractive men without losing her heart, head, or sense of honor?

My answer is, ask the A. E. F. Any man who saw me over there will tell you that the real reason they were glad to do so was that I brought them a bit of home and made them laugh. I think humor is important in love, but as a "take-off" for a flight into the realm of Romance it is not so good.

I was giving anywhere from three to nine shows a day and leaping from front to front with all the speed of an antelope and just about as much sex appeal.

Love at first sight is possible, but I do think the victims need time to take a good look at each other, and I'll bet there are very few Ex-Sweethearts who could tell you what color my eyes are.

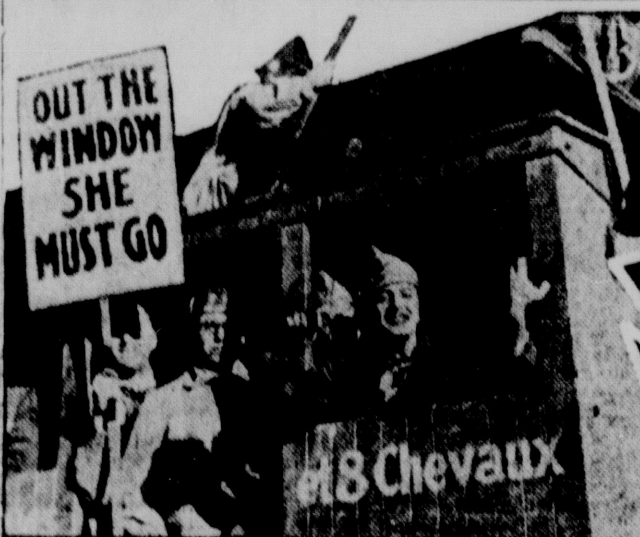

I was in love with the War and every man in it. And if you divide your affections between two or three million men, you finish up as a good scout, but your orange blossoms are bachelor buttons!

Some one said that Love and War go hand in hand, and I saw plenty of proof that this is true, but my hands were too busy waving Hello! and Goodbye! to establish any real contact!

Certainly when people are facing death it is pretty natural to look around for what may be the last love. That accounts for the many catch-as-catch-can marriages, love affairs and other acts of "Bravery While on Foreign Soil" which took place in that certain war.

Men were attracted to women under shell fire and bombs that they wouldn't take to the Annual Fireman's picnic in their own home town! Women showered their attention, sympathy, kisses, affections, photographs and love letters on men that they wouldn't write a postcard to when the Barrage of Emotions was silenced and the uniform put away in a box of moth balls.

The nurse who may have been called the plainest girl in town back home was a combination of Greta Garbo, Peggy Joyce and Joan of Arc to the guy whose temperature she took (when in doubt), and the weak, shell-shattered doughboy with a beard like a private hedge was a regular Clark Gable to the girl who

Courtesy Plus At No Charge Is Order Of The Day

New York, Feb. 11—(UP)—If a New York policeman greets you in the Grand Central Station, apologizes for intruding and asks if he can be of any service to you, don't faint.

He's one of Commissioner Mulrooney's "courtesy squad" at work. And "courtesy" isn't confined to the police force, either, these days. Service plus (at no extra charge) is a growing idea in American business.

Four-year-old Roy Mann woke up the other night, found himself alone at home. Frightened, he ran to the telephone.

"I want my daddy," he told the operator.

She comforted him, sent him back to bed. Soon he was back. This time the Chief Operator talked to him, asked him about his toys, asked if he had something warm on, learned eventually that his father had gone to visit a Mr. Ransom at Sea Cliff.

A few minutes later Mann was surprised to have the telephone company inform him his son wanted him to come home. Still more surprised was Mrs. Mann when her husband telephoned her from Sea Cliff at her next door neighbor's and told her the baby was crying.

Hits Speakeasies

Out in Kansas City the speakeasies have felt the urge for service plus. They now offer free lunch every day of the week, with a free fried chicken dinner on Sundays after 4 P. M. Nobody even suggests an order unless the customer rings for the waiter—which usually happens.

Air cooled dining cars have been installed on the M. K. & T Railroad out of St. Louis to Texas, a wonderful feature for travel in the sweltering summers of the southwest. Passengers are invited to set in the diners and cool off between meals. And afternoon tea is served all passengers without charge. In the club cars mineral water is served free by Negro attendants who say to each passenger, obviously on orders, that the drink is "with the compliments of our president, Mr. Cahill."

Milk For Babies

The American Airways at Dallas, Tex., has a growing list of "courtesy" services. Recently a small icebox was put aboard one of the liners just to keep milk for a 4-months-old baby making the trip.

The line arranged for physicians at every stop to meet the airplane in which a young woman was rushing back to California where she wanted her child to be born.

Coffee and waffles, magazines and newspapers, strip maps showing the route are all furnished free on these airplanes.

The courtesy service to which the line points with most pride, however, was when Ike Sewell, Assistant General Traffic Manager, and former Texas University football star, carried six passengers across the Brazos river on his back when an airplane was forced down on the prairie by a low ceiling.

In Cleveland one large department store, the May Company, maintains a rental bureau which assists customers in finding homes and apartments, operates a garage where customers may park their cars and keeps a children's playground where customers' children may be left under supervision—all without cost.

Even the hotels seem to be getting the idea. One Fort Smith, Ark., hotel presses each man's suit without charge.

EGG WEIGHED 3½ OUNCES

CAMPBELLESPORT, Wis.—(UP)—Among the eggs sent to a store here from the farm of Miss Eva Allen was one weighing five and one half ounces and measuring eight and one-half inches in circumference. It contained a single yolk.

RED OPPOSSUM TRAPPED

Auburn, Neb.—(UP)—Clyde Argabright is the champion "possum hunter" of this community—not by the number he has caught, but by the color of one he caught. Argabright trapped a red opossum. They are usually gray.

HIS FACE

THEY tell you Lincoln was un-gainly, plain? To some he seemed so true; Yet in his look was charm to gain.

Even such as I, who knew With how confirmed a will he tried To overthrow a cause for which I would have died.

The sun may shine with naught to shroud Its beam, yet show less bright Than when from out eclipsing cloud It pours its radiant light; And Lincoln, seen amid the shows of war, Clothed in his sober black, was some how felt the more

To be a centre and a soul of power— An influence benign To kindle in a faithless hour New trust in the divine Grave was his visage, but no cloud could dull The radiance from within that made it beautiful.

A prisoner, when I saw him first— Wounded and sick for home— His presence soothed my yearning's thirst. While yet his lips were dumb; For such compassion as his countenance wore I had not seen nor felt in human face before

And when, low-bending o'er his foe, He took in his firm hand My wasted one, I seemed to know We two were of one Land. And as my cheek flushed warm with young surprise, God's pity looked on me from Lincoln's sorrowing eyes.

Suits The Popular Note of Spring

BY DIANA MERWIN

Paris, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Spring costumes may be silk or wool, plain or trimmed, but a large percentage of the time they will be suits.

Silk suits are especially popular, and are shown in numbers by Chanel, Mirande and Lanvin. Patou varies the silk suit with a loose bolero, and also shows the bolero suit in linen.

Two piece suits with short, semi-fitted jackets are featured in Augusta Bernard's collection. Very short jacket suits are used by Vionnet.

A white Shantung ensemble is sponsored by Lanvin, as well as many ensemble coats in three-quarter and seven-eighths length. Wool coat ensembles are found among Patou's costumes and Vionnet shows print ensembles with a chiffon dress and a crepe coat of the same pattern.

Coats have many kinds of treatment. Elbow sleeved coats worn with long sleeved dresses, coats with dolman sleeves and coats with draped collars are among the throng. Cape sleeve details are very popular. Flared circular coats, often belted are used by Lanvin, as well as cats with very large sleeves above the elbow.

Soft Bang, Ringlets, Back Girls!!

BY RUTH COWAN

Chicago, Feb. 11.—(AP)—The spring robin red breast will see the bang back in favor as a style for the feminine crowning glory.

Not the formal square dutch cut bang, nor that tufted effect worn by Victorian fashion plates, but a light, soft, slightly undulating bang that will break the monotony of foreheads long bared to the elements.

This information came from Paris by way of the inner office of the Illinois Hair-Dressers' Association, where President Max Hofer studied top knot style forecasts.

However, it was stressed, the hair is dressed back from the forehead. The bang is simply soft, thinning-out ringlet curls that stray over the forehead.

Very piquant are curls peeping out from under the brim of the new hats that slant down over the right eye. Equally pleasing, the hair dresser predicted, will be light ringlets that stray out from the left temple.

An ultra-advanced hair style, he described, is one with ringlet curls outlining the haircut on the cheeks, forehead, as well as neck.

Hostesses Win Many Hearts With These Viands For Valentine's Day

Winning hearts has been quite the correct procedure for St. Valentine's Day ever since the martyred saint got himself a feast day, so it is an appropriate time for social conquests. February 14 falls on Sunday this year, making it possible for you to enliven Sunday dinner with Valentine dishes, charm breakfast or supper guests with edibles in the spirit of the day or to entertain on the preceding Saturday night.

Human nature being what it is, serving delicious food is as sure a way for the hostess to win hearts as any other. To help you be every-body's culinary valentine, the home economists have developed some new recipes; they have been tested and are presented here:

First, there is a Valentine main-dish salad, plump red pimentoes, set in a gelatine heart—the most attractive salad seen in many a month and Valentine-y as a cupid's soup stock you may use canned soup or bouillon cubes. The pimentoes must be whole, ruddy, unblemished ones, so be sure to buy a reliable brand. The seven-ounce can contains six whole pimentoes, the three and a half ounce can contains from three to four.

Stuffed Pimentoes in Aspic
2 cups soup stock
2 tablespoons lemon juice
11-2 tablespoons gelatine
1-4 cup cold water
1-2 cup diced celery
1-2 cup cooked peas
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
1 7-oz. can pimentoes

Soak gelatine in cold water for 5 minutes; dissolve in hot stock; add lemon juice, strain, and pour into six heart shaped molds which have been rinsed in cold water. Drain pimentoes and stuff with mixture of celery peas, onion and mayonnaise. When aspic begins to stiffen, immerse stuffed pimentoes in the jelly and allow them to stand until firm. Unmold and serve on lettuce. Pass mayonnaise. Six servings.

For a colorful dessert, with just enough of the traditional colors to make it festive, there is Valentine Peach Melba, an old dish in new guise. The rosy hue is provided by strained cranberry sauce, and to make the whole process a simple matter of assembling ingredients, use the canned sauce, in the strained and bright red variety.

Valentine Peach Melba
6 peach halves
6 slices stale cake or 1 dozen lady fingers
1-2 pint vanilla ice cream
1-2 cup heavy cream, whipped
1-4 cup cranberry sauce
1-3 cup shredded coconut
Line sherbet glasses with strips of stale cake of the split lady fingers. Place a canned peach half in the center of the dish with cut side up. Fill cavity left by removal of the pit with a small ball of vanilla ice cream. Cover with stiffly whipped cream into which the cranberry sauce has been folded. Sprinkle with shredded coconut. Serves 6.

Hearts For Garnish
The stained canned cranberry sauce, used in the Melba recipe can be utilized to achieve the so-necessary hearts. Run a knife around the edges of the sauce after opening the can, and remove whole. Then slice the sauce in thin slices. Using a heart shaped cookie or sandwich cutter, cut a heart from each round. Use as a garnish around the meat or fowl, or serve as a sauce. Attractive!

Dates and Kisses
Dates are very necessary to any holiday which has to do with affairs of the heart. Kisses, too, are believed essential to the smooth course of true love. When both are combined in a recipe and the result is a dainty—and wholesome—cookie, you can allow the children to indulge freely.

Date Kisses
1-3 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1-4 tsp. salt
1-2 pkg. pasteurized dates, sliced
3-4 cup sugar
1 cup walnuts chopped
1 cup almonds, chopped

Cyrena Van Gordon To Wed This Month

Cyrena Van Gordon, Juno-esque mezzo-soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera company, who came to Dixon on some seasons ago to sing, is to be wed some time this month to Howard Dunham Smith, multi-millionaire of New York and San Francisco, according to an International News Service dispatch from Boston yesterday.

The surprise engagement of the noted singer to the wealthy Mr. Smith was revealed just before Miss Van Gordon left Boston for New York. She will return to Boston in time to sing in "Il Trovatore" on Saturday.

It will be the second marriage for the opera star. Twelve years ago she eloped with Dr. Shirley Munns, Chicago larynx specialist. This marriage ended in a divorce last August.

Mrs. Vera Horton was awarded the favor for high honors and Mrs. Gertrude Carpenter received the second favor.

Delicious refreshments, which carried out the Valentine motifs, were served by the February committee.

Smart Paris Takes To Silvery Wigs As Evening Wear Copies Theatre Mode

Paris.—(AP)—Theater styles have laid a telling mark on the evening mode.

You can see the result where the smart Parisians gather for social affairs after nightfall.

Since extremely low décolletés, long wraps and sweeping skirts are out of taste and out of place in public places, semi-high décolletés, waistlength wraps and shorter skirts have taken their place for theatrical wear. And the new mode is spreading through evening styles.

The new formal Directoire line, with a high waist and close fitting skirt sweeping into fullness below the knees, marks many frocks worn on first nights. Thereafter shorter ankle-length skirts worn with detachable embroidered or jeweled bodices are the rule. Dull fabrics such as crinkly crepe, flat crepe and lace are the favorites.

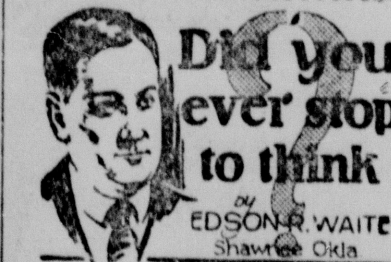

More hair dressing and less make-up is the smart woman's rule for the background which accompanies her early spring evening frocks.

Toupees are being worn by some of the very smartest women in Paris platinum-blond wigs shedding a silvery luster, dressed in ringlets all over the head and finished with a soft cluster of curls over the left temple, are the favorites although mauve and titian locks are also now to be seen.

Other smart Parisians are wearing their own locks lacquered, with a brilliant varnish and arranged in ringlets and swirls close to their heads. The pencil-roll curl, long a favorite coiffure, is gradually giving way and many smart women now are wearing their hair shorter in the back and arranged in a series of soft curls about their heads.

Brilliant and bizarre make up is out. Powder, rouge and lipstick now are applied to give a purely natural effect, while eye-shadow and mascara are worn only in the evening.

Radio Jazz Wakes Turtles From Sleep

Des Moines.—(UP)—Mrs. Clarence Cornwell has as pets in her home two turtles that, in outward appearance, are just like any other but inwardly, Mrs. Cornwell believes, they are far superior to the run-of-the-water turtles.

The pets, it seems, have a soul for music. So long as there is no music in the room they lie almost motionless in their tank of water. But the instant the radio brings orchestra music into the house they become excited and swim rapidly about kicking their feet, so Mrs. Cornwell says, in time with the music.

VAN HOEVENBERG IS EXPECTED TO AGAIN TAKE TOLL

A Nerve-Wrecking Speed In Bobsled Races Bodes Danger

BULLETIN
Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 11.—(UP)—Start of the four-man bobsled competition of the third winter Olympic games scheduled for today was postponed because of rain and temperatures which ranged between 35 and 40 degrees above zero.

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 11.—(AP)—There was tension in the air today and a hint of foreboding, a premonition of disaster, as the winter Olympics entered the final stage, where the danger of death or grave injury on the jagged sides of Mount Van Hoevenberg transcended the nerve-wracking exhilaration of the Olympic bobsled championship.

The first half of the competition was ended, and in a measure the treacherous mile and a half sweep through ice banks and dizzying hairpin turns, zigzag and cross over, stood humiliated, its dangers scorned and spurned by riders who slashed its sides at dizzying speeds of 65 and 70 miles an hour to set records that 48 hours ago were considered not only an impossibility, but absolutely insanity.

There has been a universal feeling among the steel-nerved international sportsmen who drive these 500 pound meteors at such speeds down the ice chute on the mountain side that luck of the riders, which has been good since eight Germans crashed within two days in practice, sending six to the hospital, two in critical condition, would end before these races were over and that grim Mount Van Hoevenberg would take its toll again.

Dangers Disdained

The feeling nearly faded out yesterday as Hubert Stevens, an iron-thewed and frosty-nerved giant as ever piloted a sled, whipped disdainfully through such paralyzing obstacles as "white-face," "Cliffside," "shady corner," and "zig-zag," to literally fly down the mile and a half stretch first in one minute, 59.69 seconds, then in 1:57.58 to win the fifth Olympic championship the United States has ever captured in the 1932 games and set a two-man bobsled record that should last for many years.

Handicapped by a 4.28-second deficit he conceded Reto Capadrutt of Switzerland in the first two heats, due to a slow start, Hubert and his even larger brother, Curtis, had to make it up in two final heats while Capadrutt himself was turning in phenomenal time. They took every chance that a team could take, bobbing, heaving the sled ahead every inch of the way except when gasping for breath and holding on for life in the curves and then came down in time that would have been exceptional for the heavier, swifter, more dangerous sleds.

At the end the Stevens boys, joining Jack Shea as Lake Placid's own Olympic heroes had whipped the 20-year-old Swiss University student by a second and a half, a wide margin in a race of such terrific speeds. The remainder of the field of 12 representing eight nations were distanced and the defending Olympic championship pair, Jack Heaton and Robert Minton, likewise were lost in the ruck of such competition, although they did take third place.

Today it was the turn of another local ace, calm, confident young Harry Homberger, to bear the brunt of the foreign audacity along with Billy Fiske, who won the 1928 four man championship for the United States. Little fear is felt for Homberger, who holds the world record of one minute, 52 seconds, made on this course, and who predicts that a sled will rocket through the mile and a half course in one minute, 40 seconds before the race is over. He has a surprise in store for the invaders who have had the straightaways packed with snow like European courses. Homberger likes to ride sheer, glass ice.

He has been working, almost without sleep, for several days and nights perfecting new runners, a compromise between the sharp snow runners of the Europeans and the flat, skate like blades of the American sleds, secretly he attached them to his sled yesterday, and when the two man races were over, took his crew down the slide.

He was clocked in one minute, 47.4 seconds.

There are two heats today, two more tomorrow. Total times will decide the championship.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS

THEY ALL LAUGHED WHEN JOHN MCGRAW connived to have Edd Roush's home run disallowed. The Reds were playing the Giants at the Polo Grounds. Roush was the batter and the score was tight. Just as Edd took a hefty cut at a nicely grooved ball and sent it flying for the right field bleachers, McGraw, fearing that the ball would carry for a homer, threw two balls into the infield. Base Umpire Harrison yelled "Time!" but Plate Umpire Hank O'Day called "Play!" The ball sailed into the bleachers for a homer, but McGraw disputed its legality and won. McGraw indulged in a chuckle and the Giants all laughed in the privacy of the clubhouse after the game.

whenever that sort of speed is necessary.

It is an American sled. And if it keeps the foreign riders out of the Olympic championship they will have no one to blame but themselves.

You remember a couple of weeks ago how the foreign four-maners protested against the manner in which the run was being handled, and demanded it be placed in the hands of international bobsledding officials? And how on the first day the foreign officials took charge they piled the track with snow, spoiling the clear ice surface to which the Americans were accustomed?

Well, the "mystery" sled was born right then and there. Unable to blanket track, a certain American driver directed the foreign runners which worked so well in snow, and put down all the facts and figures in a little red book. Then he called in his No. 3 man and told him of his plans. That was last Friday.

Saturday morning found the two of them in isolated little Peru, N. Y., where the bobs they used were manufactured. They hired a blacksmith and went to work. For 48 hours they hammered with little or no rest. At the end of this time they had forged runners which not only possessed all the advantages of the foreign type, but boasted of a few little private improvements of their own.

All of this was in strict secrecy.

Monday the team assembled on a secluded mountainside for the inaugural trip. The hand-made runners took the snow beautifully, cleaving it cleanly and casting it aside, instead of piling it up in front as did the old runners.

A second experimental trip was made Tuesday. The results were just as gratifying.

Knowing that none of their competitors could reproduce the new runners in 24 hours the boys went out to Mt. Van Hoevenberg, shoved off the top, and let her go. They were down in 1:47.4, the best time ever made on the mile and a half trip.

It might not be a bad idea to go out and place a little sugar on the "mystery" sled for it is going to win the championship.

The sled belongs to Harry Homberger and his Saranac Red Devils.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 11.—(AP)—An investigation conducted by Fielding H. Yost, Athletic Director at the University of Michigan, has disclosed that of 43 deaths charged against football last fall, only 22 actually resulted from the game.

Yost investigated each death and has submitted a report to E. K. Hall, Chairman of the Football Rules Committee, for its meeting at Hanover, N. H., which opens Friday.

Of the 21 reported deaths which Yost believes should not be charged to football, one by kidney disease, one by appendicitis, one by typhoid fever, six by infections and one by heart disease. One boy was injured while wrestling, another was struck by a truck, one boy was dislocated to be alive and well, and another who was reported dead was found never to have existed.

The 22 who died following actual participation in football games were classified as seven college players, seven from high schools, and eight "sand-lot" or unorganized players. Causes of death were given as follows: fracture of cervical vertebrae, eight; cerebral hemorrhage, four; peritonitis, four; coronary embolism, fracture of skull, ruptured spleen, concussion of brain, one each. Two deaths were from unknown causes.

"It is proper," the report says, "that football should be cleared of the responsibility for the deaths improperly charged against it. At the same time, it is also fitting that football take stock of itself to see what risks may be eliminated and what safeguards may be raised to prevent death in the near future."

Yost drew the following conclusions from the study:

"1. That the number of fatal injuries is in inverse proportion to the degree of coaching, training and medical supervision exercised.

"2. That apparently it is more dangerous to play on the defense than on the offense.

"3. That the most frequent cause of death is fracture of the cervical vertebrae.

"4. That fatal injuries occur principally as the result of players being struck on neck, head or abdomen by the hard fibre thigh guard.

"5. That minor injuries, cuts, scratches, etc., should receive immediate attention, especially to prevent infections."

The investigation showed that 12 players were injured fatally while playing on the defense, seven were injured on the offense, and in only three cases time of the injury was unknown.

Only one report of a football death suggested that roughness was a contributory cause of injury and death.

Yost offers four suggestions to make the game safer:

"All equipment should be designed not only for the protection of the wearer but also with consideration for the safety of the opponent as well.

"Players should be impressed with the great importance of paying immediate attention to cuts, scratches, abrasions and other avenues of infection.

"Great attention should be paid by officials to improper use of the knees and hands.

"Officials should penalize for unnecessary roughness."

ONLY 22 DEATHS RESULTED FROM GRID INJURIES

Fielding Yost Probes Fatalities During Football Season

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 11.—(AP)—An investigation conducted by Fielding H. Yost, Athletic Director at the University of Michigan, has disclosed that of 43 deaths charged against football last fall, only 22 actually resulted from the game.

Yost investigated each death and has submitted a report to E. K. Hall, Chairman of the Football Rules Committee, for its meeting at Hanover, N. H., which opens Friday.

Of the 21 reported deaths which Yost believes should not be charged to football, one by kidney disease, one by appendicitis, one by typhoid fever, six by infections and one by heart disease. One boy was injured while wrestling, another was struck by a truck, one boy was dislocated to be alive and well, and another who was reported dead was found never to have existed.

The 22 who died following actual participation in football games were classified as seven college players, seven from high schools, and eight "sand-lot" or unorganized players. Causes of death were given as follows: fracture of cervical vertebrae, eight; cerebral hemorrhage, four; peritonitis, four; coronary embolism, fracture of skull, ruptured spleen, concussion of brain, one each. Two deaths were from unknown causes.

"It is proper," the report says, "that football should be cleared of the responsibility for the deaths improperly charged against it. At the same time, it is also fitting that football take stock of itself to see what risks may be eliminated and what safeguards may be raised to prevent death in the near future."

Yost drew the following conclusions from the study:

"1. That the number of fatal injuries is in inverse proportion to the degree of coaching, training and medical supervision exercised.

"2. That apparently it is more dangerous to play on the defense than on the offense.

"3. That the most frequent cause of death is fracture of the cervical vertebrae.

"4. That fatal injuries occur principally as the result of players being struck on neck, head or abdomen by the hard fibre thigh guard.

"5. That minor injuries, cuts, scratches, etc., should receive immediate attention, especially to prevent infections."

The investigation showed that 12 players were injured fatally while playing on the defense, seven were injured on the offense, and in only three cases time of the injury was unknown.

Only one report of a football death suggested that roughness was a contributory cause of injury and death.

Britain Now Operating Longest Air Line In The World, To South Africa

The longest air lines in the world . . . are the 8000-mile route from London to Capetown, South Africa, and the 4700-mile route to Karachi, India . . . which are shown on the map above. . . The tremendous air journey now are to be made regularly by huge four-engined land planes . . . like the one shown upper right in flight and the other pictured lower right at the inauguration of the England-to-Africa air mail.

8000-Mile Route Links Far Dominion and Homeland

By MILTON BRONNER
(NEA Service Writer)

London — "Contact!"

The propellers of a huge four-engined landplane at Croydon air-drome near London begin to whirl.

"Clear away!"

With a sudden burst of speed the machine rolls swiftly across the ground, bounds off into the air and away—for South Africa.

It's just as simple as that—this taking off for the longest regular air route in the world, destination 2,000 miles away.

England leads the world in a combined mail and passenger service to the far-lying lands of the earth.

In March, 1929, the Imperial Airways, instituted its regular weekly service between Croydon and Karachi on the west coast of India—4,700 miles away.

To go by air takes just a week, whereas by steamer it takes three. Indian is thus brought just that much closer to London, to its business men, its governors, its Parliament. On the way, the planes take in Palestine, Transjordan and Iraq.

The undertaking does not pay its way as yet, so Imperial Airways is heavily subsidized by the British government for the mails it carries. Each plane averages 700 pounds of mail on every trip.

A Terrific Job

Having gotten this well under way Imperial Airways, the British government, and the government of South Africa then began to think about the more ambitious and hazardous plan for a route to Capetown.

late Robert Tilton of Rochelle at the M. E. church on Saturday. Mr. Tilton was a brother of Mrs. Arthur Dugdale's father. Mr. and Mrs. James O'Neal of Aurora, brother and sister to Mrs. Dugdale, were down for the funeral.

A splendid dinner is planned to welcome the Rev. C. D. Wilson at the close of the morning service of the M. E. church Sunday. Rev. Wilson has been a guest of his daughter at Greenville, Tenn.

Miss Orpha Knapp will be hostess to the Ashton Woman's club Feb. 16 at Blue Bird Camp.

Mrs. Adaline Porter of Rockford is town from Croydon.

The one-time "dark continent" is a tough proposition. The distances are vast. There are enormous jungle areas in which lions, leopards and wild elephants still roam, as do savage tribes. There are mountain ranges to be cleared. Extensive surveys had to be undertaken.

The route needed 27 main stations in Africa and 30 intermediate landing places in case of emergency. The Royal Air Force had built some temporary stations. These had to be made permanent. Air-dromes and emergency landing grounds had to be laid out and left in many cases in the care of local black chieftains. Jungles had to be cleared for runways. When they are cleared, they need daily care. For, if left alone, in a few days time in the jungle heat elephant grass towering higher than a man soon springs up and the myriads of huge ants build tremendous anthills against which an airplane, no matter how big, would sustain serious damage.

Seventeen of the main landing places have also been equipped with elaborate radio apparatus.

Six Days Saved

Taking mails by air between London and Capetown saves six days. But for the interior points in the equatorial regions the saving is even greater.

The last link in the air lines to link up the British empire will be a route to Australia.

The hitch in the Australia link at present is the government of India. It had been planned that, radiating from Karachi, the Indian government, should support air lines all over the vast sub-continent of India. This has been postponed at present because of the financial stringency. Once India does its part, the Australia service can be a guest of her niece, Mrs. Blanche Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Sanders have moved into the Dill Tilton farm home.

OVERPRODUCTION IS THREATENING DAIRY INDUSTRY

Department Of Agriculture Issues Warning To Dairymen

Washington, Feb. 11.—(UP)—The dairy industry, which last year showed greater resistance to depression than any other livestock field, is about to become a victim of overproduction, in the opinion of the Department of Agriculture.

"The national milk pail is full and about to run over," said O. E. Reed, Chief of the Bureau of Dairy Industry. "We must either produce less or consume more. The number of milk cows has increased materially in the last year or two, with the result that we now have at least four per cent more cows in milk than we had a year ago, and between six and seven per cent more than two years ago."

The expansion of the dairy industry has been the natural result of a two-fold stimulus. The returns have been better than those of alternative enterprises, and the margin between feed costs and the price of dairy products has been such as to make advantageous the use of farm grown feeds. However, as expansion has increased, the dairy profits have gone down, and consumption of fluid milk has dropped off from 3 to 5 per cent.

A year ago the average dairy cow was worth about $37, according to the Department's estimate at that time. Today the average has dropped to $40.

The annual livestock report as of Jan. 1 put the total number of cows and heifers at 24,379,000 as compared to 23,558,000 this year before. The total value, however, was $965,758,000 as compared to $1,345,479,000.

The inventory value of all livestock on the farm has dropped nearly three billion dollars during the past two years, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reports. To-tala flocks and herds increased two per cent last year but their value dropped from $4,450,708,000 to $3,195,748,000.

COW MOTHERED YOUNG PIG

Rutheford, N. C. —(UP)—When his cow was not measuring up to expectations in milk production, Henry L. Davis, farmer, investigated and found that the cow was mothering a 10 months old hog that had fed, like a calf from the cow.

WASHINGTON

HIS LIFE STORY IN PICTURES, COMMEMORATING THE 200TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS BIRTH.

4. His Romance

Washington met Martha Custis, wealthy and charming widow, at the home of a friend, in 1758. It was a case of love at first sight.

He extracted her promise to permit him to call, and within two months he proposed.

They were married, in an elaborate ceremony, less than a year later.

Washington became devoted to his two step-children, Patsy and John Parke.

By NEA Service

George Washington was essentially a "man's man"—tall, straight and athletic—but he also was a great favorite with the ladies.

From boyhood, he was quick to fall victim to the fascinations of the fair. Some historians have greatly exaggerated this amiable weakness. The truth seems to be that he often lost his heart—but experienced little difficulty in finding it.

That is—until he met the charming and wealthy young widow, Martha Dandridge Custis, at the home of a mutual friend. It was a case of love at first sight.

George met Martha in May of the year 1758. He proposed to her within a month and married her on Jan. 6, 1759. The wedding was attended by the most dashing and fashionable people of the land. The sportsman governor dazzled the glittering assembly in scarlet and gold.

This marriage brought Washington a $66,000 fortune, including 15,000 acres of land, a number of town lots near Williamsburg, and many slaves.

Washington was devoted to his two step-children, Patsy and John Parke Custis. Their health, education and property were carefully supervised.

He engaged a special tutor for Patsy and may every possible effort to cure her of epilepsy. Her death in 1772 was a shock to him. He sent his step-son to King's College in New York.

Martha efficiently supervised Mt. Vernon. House parties were frequent. Washington's connections with the affairs of state and nation brought a steady influx of guests. During the war, Martha refused to be separated from her husband, and whenever possible, even in winter, she stayed with him in camp.

POPE RECEIVED MUSSOLINI THIS MORN IN LIBRARY

What Took Place When Two Chiefs Met Is Kept Secret

(Copyright, 1932, by The Associated Press).

Vatican City, Feb. 11 (AP)—Premier Benito Mussolini II Duce of Italian Fascism, and Pope Pius XI, Holy Father to the Catholic world, met today in the Pope's library at the Vatican for the first time and, sealing the peace of the church and state which was begun by the Lateran treaty three years ago.

The Premier's first visit to the Pope had been looked for for several months since the settlement of the controversy over the Catholic Action Society.

Judging by the Premier's smile as he emerged, the meeting was most pleasant. It was not learned if they discussed state relations, but from all signs it was a thoroughly friendly talk.

After the private conversation ended II Duce presented the members of his party to the Pontiff and then reverently bent and kissed the Pope's ring, as he did when he entered, after which he said farewell and went to visit Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State. Later he went to St. Peter's and knelt in prayer.

No one witnessed the meeting. Tradition, however, called for II Duce to bend his knee and kiss the Pope's episcopal ring as a sign of reverence.

This was the first meeting of the two chiefs who settled Italy's long quarrel with the church. Both come from Milan. Mussolini doubtless has seen the present Pope during ceremonies there. The Pontiff, then Cardinal Ratti, was for seven months Archbishop of Milan and Mussolini was the youngest leader of the growing movement.

SENATE OF NEW YORK TO PROBE ROOSEVELT RULE

Investigation Of His Administration Is Voted Wednesday

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 11 (AP)—The Republican Senate of New York state has passed a resolution to investigate the Democratic state administration headed by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, presidential candidate.

In a surprise move last night the majority party brushed aside Democratic opposition and put through the resolution for a thorough inquiry into every department and subdivision of the state government. Not a single branch or agency of the complex governmental system would escape scrutiny.

Introduced over the name of the Finance committee, the resolution was patterned after that by which the legislature last year launched its investigation into the Democratic administration of New York City.

After its passage by a strictly party vote, 27 to 21, the measure was sent to the Assembly, where, again with Republican guidance, its passage was considered certain.

Undertaking ostensibly to find out why state budget obligations for the coming year should amount to 301,000,000, the resolution was branded by a Democratic Senator, William T. Byrne, of Albany, as purely an attempt to find "ammunition for the campaigns—state and national—in 1932."

The dime-a-dance girl

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beautiful ELLEN ROSSITER, a salesgirl in Barclay's Department Store, lives with her extravagant mother, MOLLY ROSSITER, her elder sister, MYRA, and her young brother, MIKE. The two girls support the family. Molly foolishly spends money saved to pay the rent. Ellen decides to work at night at Dreamland as a dance hall hostess until the sum is made up. The hostesses must wear evening dresses and Ellen owns none.

STEVEN BARCLAY, a man of 37 and Ellen's employer, sees the girl crying and discovers the situation. He offers to give Ellen a dress but she proudly refuses. He then loans her a dress from stock. Ellen is half-pleased, half-frightened by her wealthy employer's obvious interest in her. But she forgets him entirely when at Dreamland she meets handsome LARRY HARROW-GATE, an artist whose prospects, in his own phrase, are exactly nothing. She accepts Larry's invitation to tea the following day. Her mother is already planning that Ellen shall capture Barclay which exasperates the girl. She says nothing of the meeting with Larry.

In the morning flowers arrive from Barclay. Ellen is distressed because they are not Larry's gift, but her mother and sister are delighted.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII

THE initial excitement over Steven Barclay's flowers and Steven Barclay's intentions simmered down a little as breakfast progressed. For one thing, Mike with his clamorous demands for "More toast, Ellen" and "Just a little teeny bit of your coffee, Mom," made any sustained discussion impossible. But after he had gulped his food and scampered away, Molly was at the fascinating topic again. The went straight to the main issue.

"Mr. Barclay is a bachelor, isn't he, Ellen?"

"I don't know and don't care," Ellen answered on a note of rising resentment. "Oh, dear! I'm sorry," she apologized, as tears welled up in Molly's eyes. "I didn't mean to be rude. I just hated being made a Roman holiday. I think he's a widower."

"Gress," supplied Myra. "He's been married twice. I don't know what happened to his first wife but he divorced the second one—got a Mexican divorce. The papers were full of it at the time." Myra concluded self-consciously. "The second Mrs. Barclay was Leda Grayson—that notorious dancer. There was a terrific scandal."

"Oh," said Molly uncertainly. She was dashed. "Then that's different."

"It wasn't his fault," Ellen put in suddenly, reluctantly compelled to come to Steven Barclay's defense. "I remember the whole story now. It was all a woman's fault."

"I should say it was her fault," Myra commented warmly. She amplified her statement. "Leda Grayson cheated on the first but Mr. Barclay was chivalrous enough to get a divorce in Mexico. Incompatability or something. Everything was settled in secret but they say she got $1,000,000 for taking back her maiden name. Nobody criticized him at all."

"That's good. Then everything's all right," sighed Molly, relieved and not ashamed to show it. "I felt sure he wouldn't have shown Ellen attention if things hadn't been all right."

"What are you trying to do?" asked Ellen in a tone which she hoped hid her annoyance. "Make me Steven Barclay's third wife on the strength of a few flowers?"

"You can talk like that, young lady, but you can't fool your mother," Molly declared in her airy assumption of sophisticated maturity. "Flowers might mean nothing from a young boy. But an older man doesn't do things like that and the camp, but it was a nightmare of a journey. On steep trails the boy had to dismount and lead the burro.

Once he slipped into a swollen stream and lost his hold. He grabbed at the branch of a tree and by superhuman effort pulled himself to the bank and fought on again, until he found his father.

"I just had to help mother," Johnnie said simply.

Newman, Calif., Feb. 11 (UP)—Johnnie Hanshaw, 7, who fought through a blizzard to bring help for his stricken mother, couldn't understand today why mountaineer neighbors called him a hero.

He was happier to learn that his mother was out of danger—that his 10 mile fight which almost caused his own death was not in vain.

"I had to get help for mother," the youngster said. "That was all there was to it."

The story of Johnnie's heroism was revealed when he arrived, weary and fainting, at a camp where his father and grandfather were at work, 10 miles from their mountain cabin.

The men rushed back with aid for Mrs. Hanshaw, and today they told Johnnie that she would recover.

Johnnie was playing with his eight-year-old sister and a little brother of five when the mother became ill and delirious, then fainting. Outside an icy wind was blowing and snow was deep on the ground.

Johnnie donned his warmest clothes, reached the stable and saddled his pet burro. They started for where she has been the guest of relatives.

Mrs. W. J. Donaldson and Miss Drom motored to Antioch Sunday where they visited relatives of the latter.

"I'm sorry I said such things," Ellen began in a shamed voice.

you know it. You're only trying to throw dust in my eyes."

ELLEN was furious. She was conscious all the time that she was being ill-natured and ungracious, conscious that she was blaming Steven Barclay because his flowers were not from another man, blaming him, as well, for her mother's foolishness. But she could barely restrain herself from rushing from the table when Molly began to plan for future engagements with Barclay.

"You'll need two or three light little dresses for evening," she was saying. "Luckily it's summer and you can wear anything. I do wish your Aunt Myra would send another box. It's about time for one."

"What are you thinking of, mother?" Ellen protested in a vain attempt to check the tide. "You're making tremendous plans on nothing at all. I won't have it!"

"Well," responded Molly, hurt. "If you don't want us to share your pleasures with you—why I guess—"

Ellen was suddenly remorseful. Mother was mother, delightful, feather-headed, irresponsible. There was no need to destroy her gaiety. As she comforted her, Ellen's amused tolerant look went to meet Myra's self-conscious eyes. And she saw with an unpleasant shock that steady, sensible Myra, for once, had sided against her. Myra believed she had been deliberately coquettish.

Molly readily forgave the grave injury that Ellen had done her. The easy tears dried and she was laughing, sparkling again.

"You'd better be good to me," she gayly rebuked Ellen. "I've a surprise I've been keeping for you. Yesterday after you telephoned about not having the right dress I went out and bought you a lovely printed chiffon with the cunningest little jacket that you take off when you dance."

There was an appalled silence. Molly added nervously, defensively, "It was a great bargain and quail, and other ground-feeding varieties, from being depleted because of insufficient nourishment during periods of snow and ice. The practice of cutting away brush and weed patches, grazing woodlots and replacing hedgerows with modern fencing has reduced the natural winter food supply.

The Wisconsin conservation department, in addition to providing 80 central food stations for prairie chickens, grouse, quail, pheasants, partridges and wild turkeys in various concentration and experimental areas, has recruited nearly 200 sportsmen's clubs in a feeding program. The state is contributing $1150 to each club that furnishes a like amount for establishing and operating feeding stations in its territory.

Missouri officials have enlisted the aid of Boy Scouts, rural postmen, railroads and organizations in feeding the birds. Other states are prepared to carry on local programs through field men. Many clubs have employed jobless men to gather wild seeds during the abnormally warm winter.

with endless waiting. Surely Ellen could not in the brief space of one night have met another Bert. Surely life could not be so cruel just when it had seemed things were to be easier, just when, she admitted honestly, it had seemed that Ellen had at last met the man who was to rescue them all.

"Did you mean anything special, Ellen?" Myra spoke at last with effort and hoped that Ellen's jeering laugh would prove her wrong. But Ellen did not laugh.

"No, I didn't mean anything special," she replied uncomfortably, after an appreciable pause.

"That's why you weren't pleased over the flowers, isn't it?" Myra persisted. "It was because you met someone you liked better last night at Dreamland? You spoke of meeting someone there. It was a man, wasn't it, a man that you liked?"

Her breath rose and fell on a long sigh.

"Yes, I did," Ellen replied defiantly, her bright, hostile eyes moving from her sister to her mother and back again. "Furthermore, I hope you and mother will be kind enough to let me handle my own affairs. I don't meddle in yours."

"I'm sorry, dear."

"Don't 'dear' me!" burst out Ellen furiously. "You and mother—both of you—make me sick. We're poor. All right, I can recoup the family fortunes by trying to trap a rich man into marriage. That's a fine and honorable solution. That's just great! It makes no difference what I—"

SHE burst unexpectedly into tears and rushing from the table ran into the bedroom and flung herself upon the bed. When Myra followed and sat down on the bed she refused to speak except to insist hysterically that she be left alone.

Where 200 Million American Dollars Now Invested in War-Torn China

Bulk Of U. S. Business Concentrated In Shanghai, Battle Scene

By NEA Service
Two hundred million dollars in capital investment, 700 American firms, 5,000 Americans who are employed by them—
That is America's commercial stake in war-torn China, according to 1932 figures just compiled by Julian Arnold, U. S. commercial attaché in China, and published by the American Chamber of Commerce at Shanghai. Copies of the attractively printed booklet, "China—Through the American Window," have just reached this country.

In addition to its commercial population the United States has approximately 5000 citizens engaged in missionary work in China.
More than half of all American firms in China are in Shanghai, scene of encounters between the Japanese and Chinese. There, too, are about 4000 Americans—and approximately $135,000,000 of America's $200,000,000 total investment, representing 400 of her 700 business enterprises in China.

In commercial importance, Shanghai is China's New York City. It lies in about the same latitude as Mobile, Ala., but its climate is more like that of Washington, D. C. It is situated on the Yangtze delta, in which—with an area about the size of the state of Illinois—there is an estimated population of 40,000,000, or 800 to the square mile.

It is the commercial bottle-neck of China. Forty per cent of China's foreign trade passes through this port. Its population has doubled in the past 15 years, and it is now rated as the fifth city in the world. As the result of a record-breaking building boom in 1931, it now has the tallest skyscrapers in all Asia.
"American trade with China has increased more rapidly during the past 15 or 20 years than has China's trade with any other nation," says Arnold.

He quotes a British trade report for the period between 1913 and 1929 which shows that China's imports (in 1913 values) changed materially. Here are the figures:

Britain's exports to China decreased 33 per cent.
Germany's exports to China increased 36 per cent. France's exports increased 100 per cent. Japan's exports increased 52 per cent.

The United States' exports to China increased 270 per cent.
These figures necessarily omit trade with Hongkong and Tientsin, which is not credited on Chinese customs returns. Include these, says Arnold, "and America's trade with China would be entitled to serious consideration for first place in China's foreign commerce."

China's chief imports in 1930, in the order named were:

	Pct.	Value in Total U. S. Gold
Cotton goods	11.3	$69,000,000
Raw cotton	10.1	60,800,000
Rice	9.3	58,700,000
Sugar	6.5	39,400,000
Iron and steel	4.4	26,000,000
Kerosene, oil	4.2	25,200,000
Machinery	3.2	20,400,000

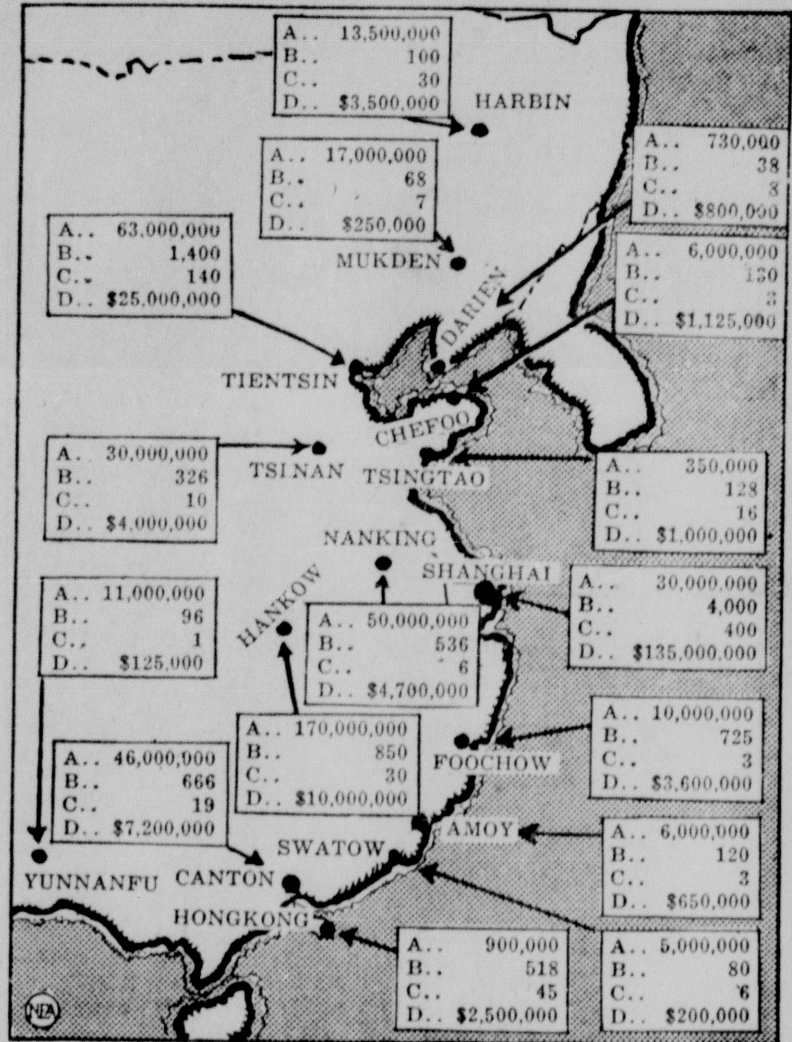

China's chief exports in 1930 were: Soy beans and products thereof, 20.7 pct; raw silk, etc., 13.8 pct; eggs and egg products, 5.7 pct; peanuts and peanut products, 4.3 pct; wood oil, 3.4 pct; coal, 3 pct.

The most recent data received by the U. S. Department of Commerce at Washington shows 14 per cent of America's investment in Shanghai is in export-import trade, 23 per cent in public utilities and 17 per cent in banking and finance.

All the public utilities investment is in Shanghai, as is most of the manufacturing, banking and trade business. New York banking houses have their chief branches at Shanghai but also other branches at Peking, Tientsin, Hankow, Harbin, Canton and Hongkong.

America's trade with China goes back a long, long way. The first American ship to engage in the China trade was the Empress of China, which sailed from New York for Canton in 1783, carrying 30 tons of wild ginseng roots from the mountains of West Virginia.

During the year that George Washington was elected the first

A—Est. Chinese pop. for district
B—Est. U. S. pop. for district

D—Est. U. S. investments

This graphic chart, taken from a 1932 publication of the American Chamber of Commerce at Shanghai, shows where America's $200,000,000 investments in China are. Each city represents an American consular district and the figures given are for its area.

President of the United States, 15 American vessels engaged in the China trade. In 1790, it was estimated that one-seventh of American imports were from China. In 1817, American imports and exports with this country were each about $5,000,000. The imports consisted in the main of tea and silks, but also included camphor, chinaware and white lead. The cargoes to China comprised, in the main, silver, furs, ginseng copper and sandalwood.

During the Civil War and the opening of the west, American trade with China declined. Toward the end of the 19th century, however it HARD TIMES? This Georgia Woman, Who Has 105 Living Descendants, Recalls Times That Were Really Tough!

By NEA Service—
Dexter, Ga. — Take it from a small, straight, brown-eyed woman who has 105 living descendants—
In other words take it from Mrs. Mary A. Shepard of Dexter, Georgia—

These so-called "hard times" really are pretty soft.
Rushing in where economists and financiers fear to tread, Mrs. Shepard opines from the wisdom of her 85 years and the depths of the old hickory chair which her husband made a half-century ago, that the only depressing thing about this depression is the way her grandchildren and great-grandchildren "complain about such little things as salary cuts."

"Twas Tougher Than
"Law me alive!" said Mrs. Shepard. "Folks these days don't know a thing about hard times. I recollect the days right after the war between the States, when I reared my family right here in the Piney Woods of South Georgia."

"I married when I was 18, and my husband had not been long home from the war when we started farming. Many a time, he has driven an ox team 20 miles to the nearest town to bring home fertilizer, and the mud axle deep all the way. I never knew what it was to buy a pair of stockings or a pair of socks, I knitted them all."

"We raised cotton and sheep and I spun and wove the cloth to make all the clothes for my husband and the children. I dyed them with walnut hulls, beat up in a sack and boiled and strained to make a very brown dye. Or, I went to the creek and pulled branches from the gall berry bushes and made a black dye of them."

"There was plenty of indigo, growing in the woods, wild, in those days and I used it for blue dye. There were no sewing machines in my part of the country and I made every stitch of the clothes with my fingers."

"Law me, alive! My great-grandchildren are living in Paradise and don't know it."

Three generations make up the 105 living descendants of Mrs. Shepard. There are six children, 46 grandchildren, and with the exception of grandchildren and 53 great-grand-12, they all live within the limits of the county where they were born.

"I have six children living," she said. "My oldest son, who is dead, is survived by ten children and 26 grandchildren, which makes enough offspring for almost any family, but that is only a starter. Mary, the oldest daughter, has ten children, and ten grandchildren."

SCHOOL REGISTRATIONS INCREASE

Twelve scions of the Shepard family are scattered about the United States, but the other 93 reside near "Granny" where they may see her often. She, too, "visits around" among her children. For she stopped keeping house three years ago when she was weakened by an attack of pleurisy, her only illness in her 85 years.

Igoe Says Illinois Will Back J. Ham

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 9 —(UP)—
Illinois Democrats are "one hundred per cent behind United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis as their party candidate for the party presidential nomination," Michael L. Igoe, Chicago, Democratic National Committeeman from Illinois, said here today. Igoe's statement was prompted by a report that he would support an "Al Smith for President" movement in Illinois.

"There is no doubt but what Illinois will send a delegation to the Democratic national convention which will be 100 per cent behind Lewis for President," said Igoe, who is a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Igoe said he interpreted Smith's recent announcement that he would not refuse the Democratic presidential nomination as being equivalent to "serving notice on his party that he (Smith) wants to be considered in the makeup of the ticket."

BEER REGIME RULING NIGHT LIFE IN PARIS

Montmartre Has Its Daily Fun Along Cheap- er Lines

Paris —(UP)— Since the deluge came in 1929, Montmartre has proven one of the best barometers for world business conditions.

The gilled cabarets were the first to respond to the general depression. One after one, they closed up. Toward the end of 1930, only two or three regular night cabarets in Montmartre were running on a paying basis.

The depression shut off the spenders, but inasmuch as it did not entirely shut off human thirst, the beer and sandwich elements continued to thrive, and it is now a brisk and flourishing beer regime that is running things in Montmartre.

Cheap Fun
Paris is reacting normally to the demands for cheap fun. Where some of the old-time palaces, once existed, now can be seen rollicking night haunts, where the highest priced drink is ten francs, and where champagne is almost unknown.

Perhaps the depression has helped Paris, because it was on the verge of losing its naive attraction. With the after war prosperity, Paris began to lose its rare simplicity, and a sort of dazzling pretension appeared. Paris lost its head in a maze of gold and modern art, but the depression brought it back to its senses.

We now see in Montmartre such places as the Ange Rouge, or the Red Angel, where the best traditions of the Bal Musette are maintained and which is crowded nightly. Eight francs for a drink, as compared to 20 francs for a drink at the bar and 300 franc for champagne of a few years ago, distinguish this establishment.

Sailors' Club
There is the Boite a Matelots, or the Sailors' Club, with coils of rope and rough ship's doors, and decoration pertaining to the seven seas. There are new cafes opened up, where coffee and beer and sandwiches and onion soup abound, and where five francs will quench thirst and assuage a light hunger.

In Montmartre the prevailing idea is fun. There are dozens of new cafes open, such as the flying trapeze, where a gymnasium layout provides the setting for a dance hall. Agile spenders can chin themselves on bars, swing up from a tango on the hand rings, or climb up the pole to the balcony, as in a fire house, if they feel inclined.

Old Depression Takes Sick; Dies

From The Express Messenger of February, 1932:
By HERBERT DURRELL SMART

Old Man Depression took sick and died.

No mourners were at his bier; A kindly fate caused his demise, And no one shed a tear.

He'd worn out his welcome in our midst.

His furrough he over-stayed
Mr. Optimism now is here,
His visit long delayed.

And we are praying he'll keep fit,
Nay, friend, such talk forbid.
It may be a blessing in disguise,
With good times only hid.

There's a silver lining to every cloud
Night is darkest before the dawn;
So take heart and hope for better things,
When these hard times are gone.

After a shower the rainbow comes,
To dispel the gathering gloom,
So prosperity's sun will be shining bright
On Old Man Depression's tomb.

Many a good business has been destroyed by the fear of its owner to spend money for newspaper advertising.

It takes cooperation to build a business. Both employer and employees must work with an united effort and unity of purpose to build and increase that gives them a living.

While visiting at the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce I was told that continuous, truthful advertising will prove to the world that Oklahoma is a blending of the best qualities with which Nature can endow a state and will add untold wealth to it. They know what they are talking about. Newspaper advertising always is the greatest aid in selling quality.

Common justice has it that the little man is as much entitled to walk the earth as his big neighbor and, as long as the principles of his country are observed, he will in spite of anybody. Unfortunately, some people seem to think that the big fellows have no rights at all and that the little fellow has all the rights. They are all wrong. This is a country where all have equal rights—the big and little fellows alike.

The public expects the advertising columns of their home newspaper to be an encyclopedia of the business concerns of the city.

I often wonder why so many cities daily-daily with their future. Perhaps it is because many of the die-hard type, the fellows who are short-sighted, are always thinking that things in the home town are retrogressive instead of progressive. When they talk about the home city they act ashamed of it instead of being proud, and thereby hold progress back. Modern cities long ago discovered the fact that the making of a better, busier city is up to its citizens, and in those cities there is no place for those who cannot talk, think and act in a boosting way.

Newspaper advertisers who have realized the fall of demand for merchandise and have increased instead of decreased their advertising have reaped the reward of their far-sightedness.

Parents of four sets of twins and grandparents of seven other children—all born during the last 11 years—is the amazing record of Mr. and Mrs. John Hanley of Robbinsdale, Minn. Some of their grandchildren are older than their youngest twins. All of the twins are healthy and ran out in sub-zero weather to pose with their mother in this picture. The twins are: Norman and Norma, four years old; Helen and Harold, five; Wanda and Waneta, eight; June and Junior, eleven. Mrs. Hanley is behind them. There are two other children in the family, both married. Another died.

What Is Cause Of Most Hunting Accidents Asked

Washington—Has the type of gun used anything to do with the number of hunting accidents, or is carelessness the chief factor in all cases?

In reports issued almost simultaneously, game officials of Pennsylvania and New Jersey have disagreed on the question of whether high-powered rifles are more dangerous than shotguns in hunting deer, a bulletin of the American Game Association states.

New Jersey, the only state which has outlawed the rifle in deer shooting, gave this law most of the credit for keeping its accident toll during the recent deer season down to one death and four casualties.

Pennsylvania, where the rifle is the legal weapon for taking big game, blamed its 38 fatal and 69 non-fatal accidents during the deer season on carelessness. Officials defended the rifle as being not only the best big game weapon from the animals' viewpoint, since fewer wounded deer escape to die slowly, but equally as safe.

Officials pointed out that New Jersey's season lasted only four days and its total legal kill of 1,702 deer was 56 times smaller than the legal kill in Pennsylvania. The number of hunters was said to be proportionately smaller.

After a survey of this season's accident toll and that of other years, Charles G. Stone, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, announced his conclusion that it is not the type of firearm so much as the careless handling of them which caused accidents. He said that according to figures the longer shooting range of rifles has not been responsible for any casualties. The majority of injuries have been self-inflicted or inflicted upon companions, as a result of carelessness.

While the complete record of all hunting accidents in Pennsylvania has not been tabulated, Mr. Stone said that usually small game hunting, with shotguns, accounts for six times as many accidents as big game hunting in that state. Shooting a person in mistake for game is punishable there by fine and suspension of license.

Deer Is Failure As Prognosticator

Kansas City, Mo. —(UP)— "Tex" Clark, the boss of the animals at the Swope Park zoo still has faith in his wapiti deer, but he admits that the faith is a blind one.

Last fall, when the leaves were beginning to turn, Tex went to the deer pen. He called his favorite wapiti and measured the animal's fur. The hair was two and a half inches long.

Armed with the scientific data, Tex announced that the winter would be long and cold. The wapiti deer were ready for it, and the wapiti always knew.

But when the last of January came and the temperature had not yet reached zero, or anything near it, and a schoolgirl or two had been seen in the park without stockings, Tex was asked if he was right.

Tex said he was. He insisted that the wapiti knew their weather. Maybe the winter would not be long, but before spring arrived for a permanent stay, the weather would be cold.

State Declares War On 'Hopper'

Lincoln, Neb.—(UP)—War has been declared in Nebraska on the yellow and black grasshoppers which last summer ruined North Nebraska grain fields.

It promises to be a war that will rival those against the fruit fly, the boll weevil and the corn borer of other sections.

Farmers, county agricultural agents and insect experts have sounded a warning that control measures adopted throughout the state early this year will determine the extent of grasshopper ravages next summer.

Billions of eggs, deposited in the soil last fall by the 'hoppers are ready to hatch with the first warm days of the summer sun, unless an extremely cold wave grips the northern part of the state, or unless farmers take precautionary measures.

Tests have shown that the grasshopper eggs will resist a temperature eight or ten degrees below zero without cracking.

State entomologists have made surveys to determine the number of grasshopper eggs deposited in the soil in an effort to map the control measures. The survey was made of 629 fields in 91 of the state's 93 counties. This showed that the 'hoppers of last summer had migrated during the fall and deposited eggs in all sections of the state.

BRITISH SHOW SMALL INCREASE IN FAILURES

Traditional Conservatism Aids in Weathering Financial Storm

London. —(UP)— The average British business man, an outstanding example of the nation's traditional conservatism, is weathering the financial storms with remarkable strength.

Despite the tremendous slump in business activity, bankruptcies have been only slightly more numerous than in eras of comparative prosperity.

During 1931 only 4,655 business firms in Great Britain and Ireland went into the hands of receivers. The preceding year, which was far more favorable for business, saw 4,688 enterprises bankrupt. In Scotland and Ireland there were actually fewer such failures last year than in 1930.

British Conservatism
British conservatism in business has come in for much criticism in recent years, yet it has saved hundreds of thousands of enterprises from going to the wall in the present crisis.

The severity of the test to which this conservatism is being put is revealed by the fact that bank clearings dropped 30.8 per cent during the last quarter of 1931 and 16.1 per cent for 1931 as a whole, reflecting a serious decline in business activity. The clearings have slumped from 44,896,677,000 in 1929 to 36,335,968,000 in 1931.

Of all the businesses which found it impossible to continue last year, the grocers were most numerous. The drapery and woolen trades ranked second, the building and lumbering trades third and agricultural trades fourth. The motor trade, which occupied fifth place on 1930's list was supplanted last year by the merchants, brokers and agents.

Stocks Firm
Stocks on the London exchange have not suffered from the sharp decline recently that has characterized the New York list. While the general trend on the two exchanges is nearly always similar, British securities do not experience such severe fluctuations. Toward the latter part of the year they began a recovery while the New York issues were still plunging to new lows.

Britain's worst year for bankruptcies was 1923, when 5,432 firms went into receivers hands. Largely they represented the dwindling of fortunes made in the post-war boom and the weeding out of new business built on an insecure foundation. Their passing left the long-established firms and business generally in stronger shape.

Daily Health Talk

ANGER

The training of a child in normal behavior consists not so much in suppression and elimination of undesirable traits as in the setting of definite limits of play for its native reactions.

This is true of anger. The angrier child is unattractive and ineffective. It falls an easy victim to the more aggressive children, and, if unchanged, becomes in adulthood a member of the "timid soul" clan.

On the other hand, the resentful child, the one that never forgets a hurt, and seeks vengeance for every real or imaginary offense, threatens to become a social menace.

The child instinctively resents and is angered by physical hurt and by restraint. This is as it should be, but there must be some measure of relationship between the offense and the resentment provoked.

In the undisciplined child an offense of small significance is likely to provoke unlimited resentment.

This is in part due to the fact that in addition to the physical element of pain there is in the hurt an offense against the personality or the ego of the child. It reacts to that alone and does not take into consideration extenuating circumstances, such for example as lack of evil intention on the part of the one who hurt the child, or the necessity of imposing restraint upon it.

The teaching of the child to control its anger must begin at a time in the youngster's life when there is little opportunity for appealing to its reason. It must therefore be instructed by example, and by effects. It cannot be taught much by argument.

Ill tempered parents set poor examples for their children. A child cannot be taught by browbeating and threats, to control its anger. But a genial manner will curb wrath.

To this should be added the reinforcing lesson of experience. The child that grows violent in its play should be taught that such behavior leads to undesirable ends, namely, play is stopped.

Aluminum Cars May Reduce Cost

Pittsburgh (UP)—Aluminum hopper cars, which it is claimed will reduce the weight of an average freight train by 600 tons, or the equivalent of nine loaded cars, may help railroads to reduce operating expenses.

Executives of railroads and leading industrial concerns of this district, who inspected the first of the new cars at the plant of the U. S. Aluminum Company, New Kensington, Pa., are considering possibilities of extending their use.

The cars, made of aluminum alloys, said to have the same strength as steel, are 21,200 pounds lighter than ordinary freight cars. The saving in "dead" weight in the cars would permit addition of nine loaded cars to an average 60-car freight train without increasing the total load it was said.

The first group of 10 cars were built by the Canton (Ohio) Car Works, for a subsidiary company of the Aluminum corporation. They will be used to haul ore.

Six Months In Bath Results In Patents

London —(UP)—Nathan Maisel, a retired diamond merchant, has just spent six months in a bath.

Maisel was worried because a newspaper had stated that there had been 100,000 accidents to people in baths. He was more worried when soon after he had one himself.

So he decided to do something about it. Every day, except for meals, he has spent in his bath. The results of his experiments, after spending nearly $3,500, are a non-slip rubber bath base, a soft rubber seat and back rest, and a spongy rubber pillow. An adaptable chain rest is fixed to the pillow for bathers subject to fainting fits.

Depression Causes Use Of Phone Slugs

Boston —(UP)— The depression seems to be boosting the popularity of the slug, or imitation coin.

During 1931, a total of 117,501 such slugs were deposited in Boston Elevated Railway coin boxes in lieu of dimes, compared with only 71,000 in 1930.

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Company reports that the number of slugs deposited in its pay station coin boxes increased 150 per cent last year over 1929.

EXPERT VISIONS IDEALISM UPON SCHOOL CAMPUS

Buffalo, N. Y. —(UP)— Idealism is returning to the American college campus, in the opinion of Arthur Ellt Hungerford, a director of the Student Volunteer Movement, which met recently here.

Hungerford, a trained observer, who has attended student conventions since 1910, and who has practically lived on the campus of a large American college during the past two years, reviewed the trend of student thought for the United Press from the period immediately following the World War until today.

War Reaction

"The war reaction with its resentment against discipline, with its promiscuous petting, sex laxity and shying from religion, is definitely over," Hungerford said.

"College students today hold high ideals. The present generation of students—a student generation is four years—is more serious than those of four and eight years ago. 'Flaming, outlaw youth' of the conventions at Des Moines, 1919; Indianapolis, 1923, and Detroit, 1927, had a right to its fling. It had gone through the ordeal of the World War. To the present students, however, the war means only a memory."

Calm Convention

Hungerford explained that during the 1919, 1923, and 1927 conventions, disturbances occurred on the convention floor. At the Buffalo convention all was quiet.

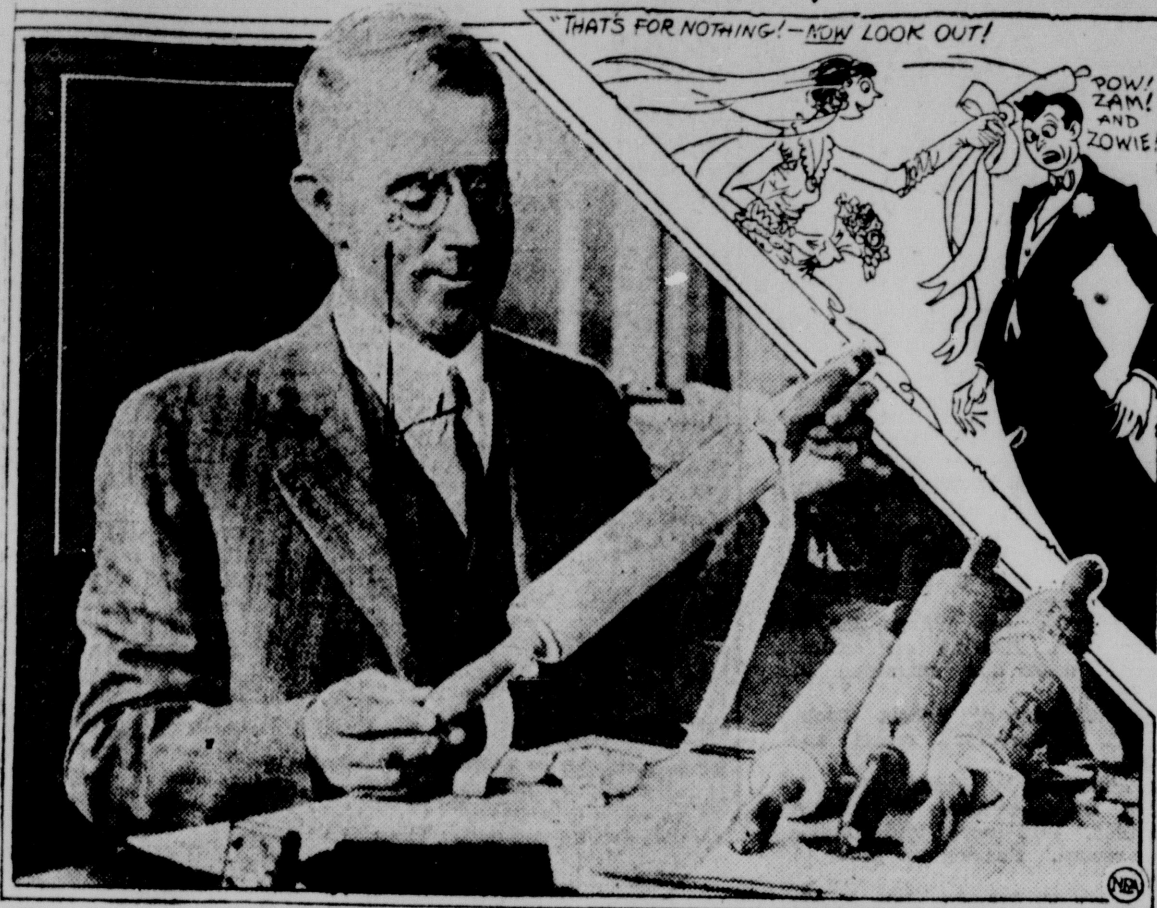

"There appears to be a growing dissatisfaction with the present industrial system. Disarmament, international and racial relations also are considered of increasing importance. Students are strong for disarmament in whole or in part."

Hungerford said, sex laxity was on the wane in American colleges.

Sex Swing

During the convention, Hungerford told the United Press correspondent that he expected a swing

State Will Vote On Wis. Blue Law

Madison, Wis. —(UP)— Wisconsin's "blue law" will be subjected to the crucial vote of its 83-year-old career in a referendum April 5.

The statute provides a maximum $10 fine for any person attending, or participating in any form of entertainment, or sport, or forming any other than necessary or charitable work on Sundays.

During the last quarter century a repeal has been sought 11 times, approved by the assembly, but refused by the more conservative senate.

In the last session of the state legislature Assemblyman John W. Grobbschmidt, Milwaukee, whose bill repealed the state dry law enforcement statute, in 1929, asked the referendum on repeal.

In a series of hearings the law was defended as a "club" for protection against violation of the Sabbath, and attacked as a "useless" statute hanging over heads of Wisconsin citizens as a threat to their rights.

The referendum resolution drew a one-side favorable majority in the assembly and survived the senate roll call by seven votes.

HONOR SYSTEM CLEARS ISLAND NEAR KAS. PRISON

Kansas Convicts Fell Trees and Observe Rules

Lansing, Kansas. —(UP)—Laughing and singing, 114 men go about their work of felling huge cottonwood trees and clearing away the brush from a river island near here.

To the casual observer they are much the same as any group of laborers, satisfied with their work and apparently happy. But they are convicts serving time.

Within a few months the men have justified the faith of Penitentiary Warden Kirk Prather in the "honor system."

The system has passed beyond the experimental stage. Briefly, the warden's plans calls for placing younger men and first offenders on their honor whereby they work under nominal guard.

Island Acreage
The state owns 1,500 acres on the island adjacent to the penitentiary grounds. Densely wooded it offered opportunity for carrying out the warden's plan. He is clearing it.

His model prison camp occupants are preparing the land for cultivation. From the center of operations a railroad spur runs to a nearby sawmill, to which the logs are hauled. Sixty convicts man the mill.

Already the convicts have constructed two dormitories, a dining room, bath houses and other out-buildings. The cost has been virtually negligible.

The warden expects to have 400 additional acres ready for spring planting. He plans to raise more than $30,000 worth of vegetables next season, thereby effecting considerable saving for the state.

One Guard
Among the lumberjacks dressed uniformly in blue denim no guards are seen. As a matter of fact, only one guard occupies the island. His sole duty is to check the men and see that they are in bed by 10 P. M.

So far not a man has tried to escape. Apparently they are satisfied to receive their four cents a day for the work, with which they may purchase tobacco and candy.

The "reform" system permits the non-habitual and minor offenders to escape in a large measure the odium of prison life. The camp has a physician and post office. Thus a man may serve his entire term without being inside the wall in contact with hardened criminals.

"Happy Valley" Of Kashmir Now Faces Big Threat

Washington, D. C. — The march of 12,000 Moslems across the border of Kashmir toward Srinagar, the capital, threatens that city, famed both in former centuries and today, for its beautiful setting in the quiet and idyllic Vale of Kashmir, among towering peaks of the Himalayas.

"The city," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society, "is a sort of urban paradox—a 'Valley in the mountains.' The Vale was covered by a great lake many thousands of years ago, and when the waters broke through their mountain barrier and drained away, they left a wide expanse of level, fertile ground. Through this mountain-rimmed plain winds the Jhelum River, widening here and there into lakes. Astride the river is Srinagar. The river is the main street; on its banks and bridges, and in its multitude of boats, from tiny skiffs to commodious houseboats, centers much of the city's life.

Has "High Powered Salesmen"
"But modernity and commerce have pushed their way into 'the Happy Valley' Maynard Owen T. Williams, staff correspondent of the National Geographic Society, who went through Srinagar a few months ago with the Haardt-Citron Trans-Asia Expedition, wrote as follows of the city's life.

"Posters for permanent waves decorate the bund of the capital of Kashmir. Boatmen, tailors, tonga drivers, barbers and other pests pester the visitor. Dealers in paper-mache, wood-carving and silverware flourish sheaves of testimonials signed by otherwise worthy men.

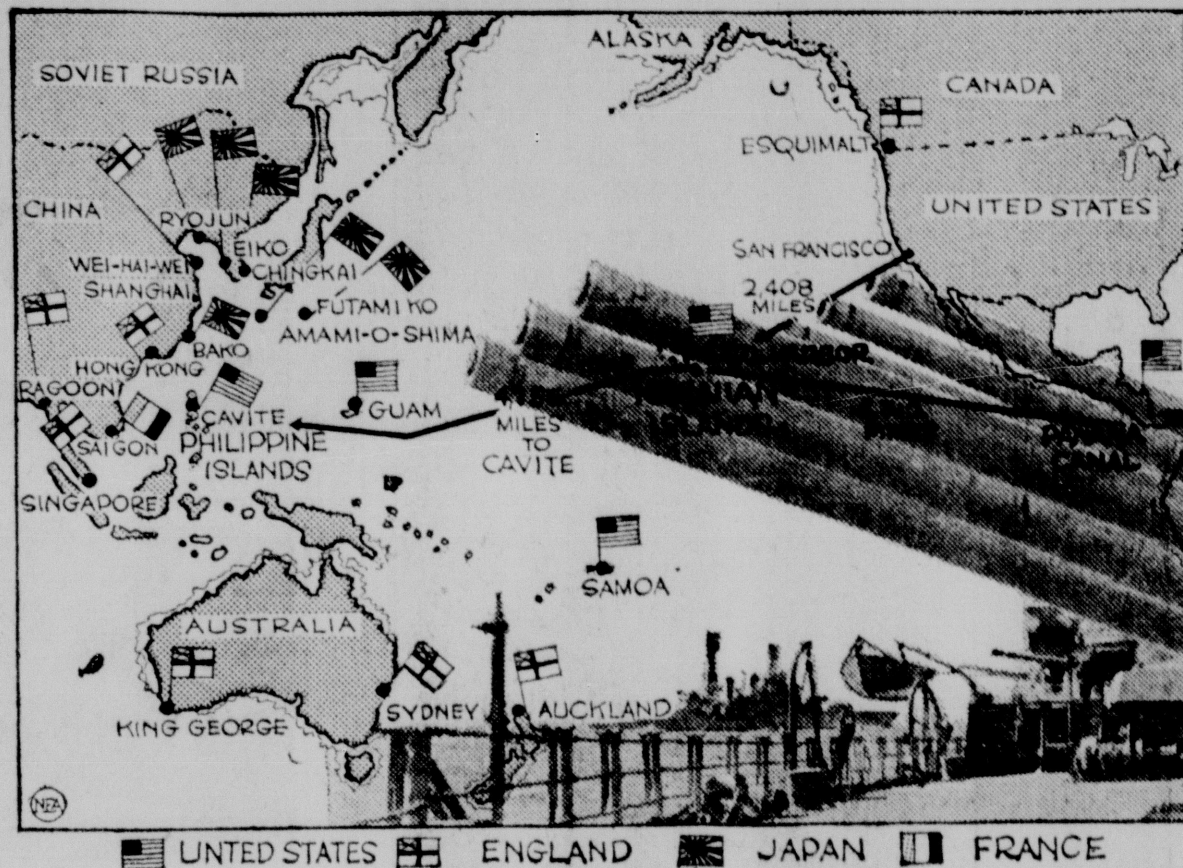

Land of Dreams
"An immaculate polo field gives the Maharaja and his officers a fine playground at the foot of Takht-i-Suleman. His Highness' red and orange motor cars add color to the colorful streets. Shady canals, bordered in beauty, lead between floating gardens, and the full moon looks on Dal Lake—such scenes as only dreamers know in less-favored climates.

"As I write, makers of leather-covered boxes and cashmere-lined Gilgit boots wander in and out. My bearer, Sultan Mohammed, comes to clear away the breakfast things and turn my stockings, as if he were a lady's maid.

"We lunch under towering cedar trees, as guests of the Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir, and mingle with his friends. By night we dine in one of his houseboats. We are rowed through the reflected beauty of lake and mountain by silent Kashmiris wielding paddles shaped like hearts."

PACIFIC OCEAN? IT'S WAR-LIKE NOW!

Map Shows How Naval Bases Of World Powers Dot Orient

By NEA Service—

In view of the present situation in China, it is interesting to remember that the two great United States bases in the Pacific, at Cavite and Pearl Harbor, are each equipped to handle a large fleet, with the exception of Hongkong and Singapore.

The French Base at Saigon is equipped to handle only small boats.

Of all the bases in the Pacific, Uncle Sam's Pearl Harbor, in Hawaii, is perhaps the best equipped and the best defended.

In addition to the distant Pacific bases shown on this map, the United States has naval stations on its own west coast, including those at Seattle, San Francisco and San Pedro, Calif.

SHIPBUILDING IN BRITAIN HITS LOWEST POINT

Lloyds Survey Reveals Conditions In British Industry

London. —(UP)—Shipbuilding, under construction in British yards at the end of December totalled only 400,505, the lowest figure in 44 years, according to Lloyd's Register of Shipping for the December quarter.

With a total production in Great Britain and Ireland last year of only 146 vessels totalling 466,666 tons, 1931 was one of the blackest years on record. Both in number of ships and in total tonnage the production was less than one-third of the output for 1930, which in turn was considerably below 1929. The figures are even more unsatisfactory than are indicated for the total of 400,505 tons includes about 154,000 tons on which work has been suspended.

All Tonnage Down
The restriction of building, however, was common throughout the world. The tonnage under construction at the end of 1931 was 1,003,290 tons, which was 110,000 tons less than was under construction at the end of September. The total under construction throughout the world amounted to 1,403,795 tons of which 28 1-2 per cent was being built in Great Britain and Ireland and 71 1-2 per cent abroad.

Other Tonnage
The tonnage of the five leading countries apart from Great Britain and Ireland is as follows:

United States 207,837 tons
Italy 178,287 tons
France 164,440 tons
Germany 103,981 tons
Sweden 95,389 tons

Oil tankers under construction at the end of the year throughout the world, comprised 45 vessels totalling 351,320 tons and represented approximately 25 per cent of the total steam and motor tonnage under construction.

DEAF AND DUMB
GIRL AWARDED
FRENCH DEGREE

First Instance Of Kind In The History Of Sorbonne

Paris —(UP)— Overcoming the handicaps of being deaf and dumb since she was 12, Mile. Suzanne Lavaud, 28, has just been awarded a Doctorate Degree from the Sorbonne.

This is the first time that such a thing has occurred in the 700 years' history of the institution. Mile. Lavaud, the daughter of the director of the Lycee Victor-Duruy, was a great encouragement to her daughter in helping to prepare for the honor she has just received.

Useful in Library
"I know that with my handicap I cannot become a teacher," she said after she had passed her examination, "but I think I may be very useful in a library."

Her examiners were Professors Gaiffe, Mornet and Baldensperger, and her thesis was the work of "Marie Leneru and Her Theater."

"I understand M. Mornet better than the others because the light was better on his face and I could see what his lips said," she remarked.

Measles Caused Affliction
Mile. Lavaud lost her sight and hearing after an attack of measles when she was 12. She began learning lip-reading and the more difficult practice of making intelligible sounds through special education along much the same lines as that used by Helen Keller. Her examination was oral, and the voice through which she conveyed the life story of Marie Leneru, a born deaf mute, who succeeded in having her plays produced at the Odon and the Theater Francaise, was entirely unheard by her own ears. It was rather colorless and mechanical but distinctly audible.

She gave spirited answers to the questions put to her, and in her enthusiasm for her daughter's responses her mother, Mme. Lavaud, applauded several times with the others who were astounded at her alertness.

Like Helen Keller, she enjoys good music and poetry from their sense of rhythm, although she is unable to distinguish actual sounds.

Experts Planning
New Hunt Of Troy

Cincinnati, O. —(UP)— The University of Cincinnati will sponsor archaeological investigations in the site of ancient Troy, in Asia Minor, next spring. It was announced after the Turkish Government had granted the university permission to begin the project.

One of the objects of the expedition will be discovery of the cemetery of Troy, the existence of which has been confirmed by modern archaeological research. Several cities were believed to have successively occupied the site of Troy.

Another object of the expedition will be the testing of the stratification of the Trojan site in view of present knowledge of the early bronze age in the eastern Mediterranean area.

Dr. Carl W. Blegen, professor of classical archeology in the graduate school of arts and sciences at Cincinnati University, will sail this month to take charge of the work. He will go first to Athens, Greece, where he will meet Dr. William T. Smead, of the University. The two will go to Istanbul, Turkey, to begin their enterprise.

University of Cincinnati is believed to be the only American municipal university sponsoring an archaeological expedition in Europe or Asia.

Paul's Opinion May Carry
Lot Less Weight But He's Sure the Crooner is Doomed

Having reduced a hundred pounds in the past year, Paul Whiteman's opinions may not carry as much weight now as formerly, but he still has his views on things. These pictures show what Paul's dieting has accomplished.

(By NEA Service)

Buffalo, N. Y., — Paul Whiteman, the old music master, used to live in a glass house himself.

But now he is throwing stones. With 100 pounds off his chest—well, off his chest and also off the other places—Whiteman feels free to do a little grand and lofty predicting.

He predicts that the day of the radio crooner is nearly at an end.

"Crooning will die out," he declared. "Something will replace it. Maybe Rudy Vallee will find out what that something is and supply it. Or maybe he will step out of the picture for a time and then come back. There is always a brief revival before the end."

Whiteman twirled his mustache a twirl—and, boy, that's a trick in itself!

"A good musician doesn't mind playing what the public wants," he said. "The catch is to find out what."

Paul lost his poundage by careful dieting. Formerly he weighed 287. Now he weighs 187. Once he weighed 350.

Students Examine Pre-Glacial Plants

Minneapolis, Minn. — (UP)— Pre-glacial plant specimens that grew 50,000 years ago in Minnesota are being examined by University of Minnesota botanists.

The plants, woods, and mosses were found at the bottom of a former well near Bronson, Minn. It is the most extensive bed of pre-glacial plants ever discovered in the state, according to Dr. C. O. Rosendahl, head of the botany department.

Specimens found are in perfect condition, preserved under the ground moraine, or earthy residue, of the late Wisconsin ice sheet which crept down on the middle western states near the end of the Pleistocene era, some 40,000 years ago.

Partial identification of the mosses, woods and plant has been made by Dr. F. K. Butters, professor of botany, Dr. Rosendahl and Robert Humphrey, assistant in the department, who has charge of the specimens.

Bits of wood, clogging a pump, brought to light the remains, Dr. Rosendahl said in relating the story of the discovery.

Increased Interest
In Coins Manifest

Los Angeles. —(UP)—A definite increase of interest throughout the country in collecting rare coins is noticed by R. A. Wilson, Los Angeles numismatist, who has made the study of American coins a hobby.

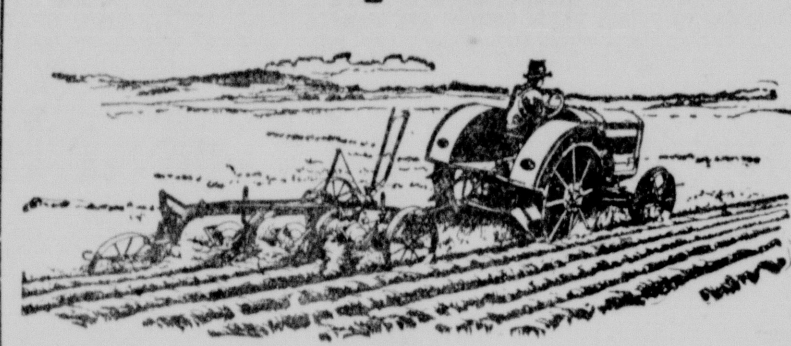

Wilson, who is not a buyer of coins, but who catalogues them and furnishes a large number of collectors with information pertaining to them, says that many persons in the United States are attempting to complete collections of small one-cent coins for the years 1856 to 1931.

However, Wilson pointed out, there is little or no added value to a used or circulated penny of recent years. Persons uneducated in the relative value of coins frequently think they can collect on defaced used coins when such is not the case, he explained.

The numismatist said that he had received thousands of letters from persons believing they could collect $1.25 on certain used Lincoln head pennies. He explained that while he did not buy coins himself, he knew that certain buyers would pay from 25c to $1.50 for 1923 "S" (San Francisco Mint) Lincoln head pennies, providing they never had been in circulation.

He also pointed out that 1913 Liberty head nickels (not the present Indian head, or Buffalo type) have a distinct valuation to collectors depending upon their condition. This type of Liberty head nickel is very rare, Wilson said.

Radio Listeners
Have Mouthpiece

Chillicothe, O. —(UP)— The silent hosts known as "radio listeners" have found a mouthpiece in Eugene Cain, of Chillicothe.

Cain doesn't claim a record and knows nothing about the 120,000,000 other listeners, but he records himself as having written 1,700 fan letters to performers and stations last year.

And he doubts whether any other non-professional and unsubsidized listener can "touch him with a ten foot pole."

He has written 64 letters this year, but is frankly worried at recent intimations of possible increase in postal rates.

Cain cultivated the habit of "scratching off a few lines of appreciation" when he was specially moved by an artist's efforts. Occasionally, he said, he dipped his pen in vitriol.

He likes the old-time graces and uses pen and ink for his praise of radio entertainers.

Cain discovered that surprisingly few radio artists answer their fans.

He once saw a woman singer take up a bundle of fan letters, shuffle through them, retain one with a Canadian postmark, and lightly discard the remainder, unopened, in a waste basket.

Guided by Nellie Devell, associate editor of Radio Digest, he is conducting a series of tests, to determine what percentage of fan letters are answered.

LINCOLN'S CITY PLANS TO HONOR ITS FAMOUS SON

A Series of Programs Arranged for 123rd Anniversary of Birth

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11.—(UP)—Programs sponsored by local civic organizations, to which the general public has been invited to attend, will mark Springfield's annual tribute to its most famous son—Abraham Lincoln—on the occasion of the 123rd anniversary of his birth tomorrow.

The Springfield Mid-Day Luncheon Club has invited residents from all parts of the nation to attend a special program to be held at the state arsenal tonight, at which Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, and Doctor Jose Manuel Puig Casauranc, ambassador of Mexico to the United States will be the principal speakers.

Two Programs
Tomorrow, the Abraham Lincoln Memorial Association will sponsor two programs. One will be held in the afternoon in the historical Circuit Court room of the Sangamon County court house, where Lincoln was a frequent visitor. The other will be in the evening at the Lincoln Memorial.

At the afternoon meeting John M. Zane, Chicago attorney, will be the principal speaker, while in the evening Louis A. Warren, Port Wayne, Ind., a director of the Lincoln Historical Research Association, will speak.

In his address, it is expected that Governor Pinchot will draw lessons from the life of Lincoln, pertaining to present day national problems.

Dr. Casauranc has announced that his subject will be "What South Americans Think of Lincoln." He was formerly minister of education in the cabinet of Mexico and has been a leader in Washington circles since assuming the office of ambassador.

Life of Lincoln
Bene and Warren are expected to talk on subjects relating to the life of Lincoln. Both men have spent years in studying the life of the Emancipator and are expected to reveal numerous incidents unknown heretofore by local people.

A feature of the visit of Pinchot and Dr. Casauranc will be a pilgrimage to the tomb of Lincoln which was recently remodeled at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars by the state of Illinois. The remodeled tomb was re-dedicated by President Hoover last summer.

The tomb annually attracts thousands of visitors from all parts of the world. Last year nearly a half million visitors from as far as the Easter Islands and as close as the immediate vicinity of Oak Ridge Cemetery visited it.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

THE WOMAN WHO MENDS

All praise to the woman—the woman who mends.
Just watch every movement, each finger she bends
To put on the patch and the edges to fell,
Or what she is thinking nobody can tell.

A pair of boy's trousers comes into her view.
She draws up the holes and the trousers are new;
A "runner" in stockings, a snag or a rip—
She remedies all so they make a new tip.

If anything's wrong with a skirt or a waist,
She's there with her needle to hem-stitch or bait;
Or, if there's a rent in a skirt or a gown,
It's mended and folded before it's laid down.

Her fingers ply swiftly as if in a race,
Each motion displaying a gesture of grace;
And many times swiftly she breaks off her thread,
With a bite of the teeth and a toss of her head.

It doesn't take long to accomplish the deed,
But it gives to the garment a help when in need.
A woman who mends is a being of gold,
Whose worth in a family can never be told.

Unusual News From Capital Of German Republic

BERLIN.—(UP)—Karl Hartung, whose posing as the secretary to Princess Hermine, the wife of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, once gained him a jail sentence, is in jail again—this time for one year on charges of obtaining money on false pretenses.

Hartung has had a varied career. He first appeared as an adventurer in the Ruhr during the French occupation. For several years he received aid from several right-wing political organizations. His earlier sentences followed his representations that he was confidential secretary and the courier of Hermine.

In his testimony here, he stated that he also had received help from Doorn. He declared that he now had no claim on the Doorn household.

The Berlin case against Hartung was due to his activities as secretary for a Berlin author. Hartung was accused of buying quantities of cigarettes on his employer's account and selling them.

Hartung also was charged with obtaining sums of money from women whom he victimized. His method was to insert personal advertisements in the newspapers stating that a "well situated young business man desired to meet a moneyed woman—purpose marriage." He admitted making several acquaintances in this way. The story of his aristocratic acquaintances would come later. The most he ever obtained from one woman was 1,800 marks.

Germany's three main seaports, Hamburg, Bremen and Luebeck, led the country in the number of 1931 divorces per capita, thereby confirming the traditional fickleness of the sailor's love. Hamburg topped Berlin with 209.7 divorces per 100,000, against the capital's 188.7. Bremen and Luebeck registered 129.9 and 99.1 per 100,000 respectively.

In general, divorces increased over 15 years. Financial difficulties attendant on the depression is blamed. Divorces among older married folk also gained, those of marriages above 15 years standing showing a rise of 10 per cent.

The price-cutting campaign undertaken by the government, coupled with the abnormal competition of depression times here offered the Berliner almost unbelievable bargains in some lines. One men's clothing store in the worker's quarter claims a customer can outfit himself completely for less than 29 marks, or just a trifle under $7. This means a price cut of 75 per

Hunter Of Men Is Becoming Farmer

Collins, Mo. (UP)—John Hagan, the private detective, who largely was responsible for the capture of Leo Brothers, alleged slayer of Jake Lingle, has become John Hagan, farmer.

For about six months, Hagan has been operating his stock farm near here, which he purchased with the reward money given him for solving the murder of the Chicago Tribune reporter.

He has stocked the place with registered cattle, and has installed the most modern of equipment. He markets his stock in Springfield. In the garage at his quiet Ozark dwelling is an expensive car, and the former detective always goes armed.

"No," he told friends, "it's not that I fear anyone. But you never know. Some pals of Brothers might look me up."

GIANT GAME TO BE PLAYED IN HUGE FIELD

Troops of Eighth Corps Area Plan Mimic War

San Antonio, Tex.—(UP)—A game with 4,400 players and a playing field of 100 square miles will get underway southwest of here in mid-May.

It will be a war game played by the ground troops and air squadrons of the United States Army.

The game will have a wonderful playing field. The Rio River will form part of what will be designated as the frontier between enemy countries. All kinds of terrain that are to armies like bunkers and hazards to golf players will be encountered.

On one side in the battle of wits and simulated destruction will be the Third U. S. Infantry, the Second Field Artillery, signal, tank and ordnance companies, and the Second Medical Regiment. Brig. Gen. Halstead Dorey will command this force of 3,300 players.

Brig. Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins will direct the opposing forces.

His force will be a smaller one, totaling 1,100. It will include the Fifth U. S. Cavalry and the Twelfth U. S. Cavalry, with auxiliary detachments.

Additional ships will be added to the Twelfth Observation Squadron, of Brooks Field, Tex., which will take part.

Latest possible equipment will be used by the players in their big game. The air equipment will include the fastest Army pursuit planes, bombers and planes mounted with machine guns to strafe ground troops.

Whether there will be a referee's decision has not been announced. One thing looked for in the game is a practical test of cavalry in modern warfare.

Havana Now Mecca For Honeymooners

Havana. (UP)—While Reno and Mexico are battling for honors in the divorce business Havana is becoming a new mecca for honeymooners, according to figures gathered by Mayor Tirso Mesa.

So far this winter 203 honeymoon couples have visited Havana and hotel registrations indicate that this number will be very close to 500 before the season ends.

"Of course, these figures tell only part of the story," explained Mayor Mesa, "for there is no way of telling how many newlyweds have evaded the vigilance of ships news and hotel reporters."

What induced the Duce to go in for motorcycling is not known, except that he is a demon for speed. The Duce in his racing car usually reaches about 80 miles an hour and keeps that speed on the long straight stretches of the Ostia speedway.

I Did It Because

The Story of a
Jealous Heart

By Fannie Hurst

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

THERE are certain things so closely enmeshed within the complicated pattern and fiber of the human heart, that to even try to explain the more subtle and terrifying of human motives and emotions were worse than useless. So felt Howard Bennett as he sat forward on his chair, with the steel-looking beads of sweat hanging from his brow.

Who knows! Perhaps he should never have married. Perhaps that streak in his nature, destined to spoil his happiness from the first week of it, might have developed under any circumstances.

Ernest, sometimes trying to analyze his sickness, and it amounted to that, felt differently.

If, perchance, he had married a woman with whom he had been less passionately, less devastatingly in love than he had been with Elaine since the hour he laid eyes on her, it all would have been different.

How could one, he argued to himself in the bitter reaches of many a sleepless night, find one's mere traveling salesman of a self married to the frailest, whitest, most lily-like creature imaginable, and not fairly burn, as a smelting furnace burns, with the jealous terror of losing her.

The fact that this lily of a girl, this almost naively adoring, patient and confiding wife of his harbored neither a straying eye nor a straying fancy, did not serve to mitigate the chronic torture that befell the luckless youth, as more and more the precious truth of her desirability impressed itself upon him during the first few years of their alliance.

To add to anguish, his role of traveling salesman took him from home four, six and eight weeks at a time, and it was borne in upon Bennett, during these some few years that his equipment fitted him for practically no other kind of work. Once, indeed, he went so far as to resign his nine-year position with a wholesale shoe firm and set about the perilous task of finding a position that did not take him from the home. After three months of one serious case of maladjustment after another, it was a chastened young husband who sought, and obtained the old position, which owing to secret and utterly unjustified pangs of jealousy over his wife, he had resigned.

"After that, realizing that his fears and suspicions amounted to insanity, and that his ceaseless jealous carplings were wearing down even the sweet and gentle resistance of his wife, there was a pronounced improvement in the manner and attitude of Bennett. He no longer reproached her for the slightest wandering of her glance if they happened to be walking together on the street; ceased dropping in from his trips, one, two and three days before he had announced himself due, and for awhile it seemed to the luckless Elaine that now, at last, she had got her marriage on some kind of an even keel.

But slowly, surely, like a beast creeping up on its prey, there crept back into the heart of Bennett, while traveling, the old terrors and suspicions concerning his wife.

She was so fair. She was so infinitely desirable. She was so over and above any qualities that existed in any woman he had ever known. Naturally, men would covet her. Why not? She was something to be coveted. She was something worth coveting! At last, all her goodness and sweet patience to the contrary notwithstanding, she was only human.

And so there overshadowed the household, torment and fear and all the ugly anguish that follows in the wake of jealousy.

With her lovely blue eyes that had already cried more than their share, imploring sanity of her husband, it sometimes seemed to him, holding her closely after one of his tantrums over a trifling nothing and imploring to be forgiven, that the only way out of his dilemma of fear concerning this darling of his life-time, was death. Death for them both. Then he could be sure . . . only then. . . .

There were so many possibilities for losing her. He was away at least six months of his year. Before her marriage Elaine had been courted and sought more than any girl in her set. God knows, he used to ask of himself, why she chose him. It must have been his adoration . . . his mad, blinding adoration, that drew her.

There had been many a heart ache over this marriage. Bennett could have counted them off on his ten fingers. Even the rector of her church, talented, young, sought after, the type of man who "had everything," had notoriously been in love with Elaine when she up and eloped with Bennett.

Elaine, who "had everything," could in turn have had Dr. Bradford Losee who "had everything" and miracle of miracles, she had married Bennett.

Well, when a man had a bequest like that, Bennett was apt to argue with himself, it made a maniac of him. It was like owning a jewel with no vault, casket, or case strong enough to protect it.

And strangely, adding fuel to this secret fire within Bennett, the only source of solace in these terrible years of the realization of her husband's folly lay in the quiet sympathetic moments she could manage to spend with her rector.

Dr. Bradford Losee, who since the marriage of Elaine and Bennett had become engaged to a now adored girl who was finishing a final year's missionary work in China before coming home to her marriage, seemed to realize better than anyone else, the quality of anguish that resided in the heart of Elaine, and at the same time to have a sympathetic understanding for the plight of her husband.

"I think I'll have to leave him, Bradford," she cried to him over and over again, as time after time the fires of jealousy had raged and burned in the household, "I can't stand it. I love him. I'm truer than true to him, and in his heart he knows it, but he's killing me, Bradford. Killing me."

"God and time will work their miracles, Elaine. There is not evil in Howard's heart. Only weakness and doubt."

That was true. And true also was the fact that deep in that twisted forlorn heart of his Bennett knew his wife to be innocent; innocent of the suspicion he came more and more to harbor, that between her and Bradford old fires were kindling.

He knew her to be innocent with his mind and with his heart he burned and hurt and raged and fayed.

Time after time, coming home according to his old ruse a few days before schedule, there occurred in his household, because he had found her in the innocent company of this or that person, or in innocent tasks pertaining to this or that relationship, scenes too shameful to bear telling, and time after time she had crouched beside her rector, begging him for strength to go on, and time after time, out of the wide sympathetic understanding for both of them, Bradford had given her that strength.

It was on the occasion of one of the unexpected homecomings that, finding her on her knees beside Bradford in the library of their home, without a second's hesitation, Bennett reached for his hip pocket and fired.

. . . sitting there in the witness chair, the steel beads of sweat out all over him, and trying to begin to explain to the judge, why he had committed the heinous crime of killing his wife and her rector, suddenly Bennett knew the futility of the attempt.

There are certain things so closely enmeshed within the complicated pattern of the human heart, that to even try to explain the more subtle and terrifying of human motives and emotions were worse than useless.

Always Springtime in Quito, on the Equator

The suburbs of Quito, the capital of Ecuador, nearly touch the equator, but its 100,000 inhabitants enjoy perpetual springtime, says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. The city nestles in a bowl-shaped depression nearly two miles high among the Andean peaks.

Snow-capped mountains are visible from the streets. Before the completion of the Quito-Guayaquil railroad, connecting the capital with Ecuador's principal gateway and port, Quito was isolated. The few travelers that visited the city trekked for two weeks over difficult trails to reach Quito. Now, by rail, they may alight at the Quito depot the evening of the second day out of Guayaquil.

Many Indians make Quito their permanent residence; many come and go from the rural districts with the Quito sun. In the market place the bright shawls and ponchos of the natives add color to the piles of fruit and vegetables, homemade dolls and dyed cloth. Some of the bronze-skinned visitors, particularly those who specialize in selling blankets, prefer the streets to dispose of their merchandise. Nearly all of them wear Panama hats because Ecuador is the home of Panama hats.

In nearly three centuries that the Spanish ruled Ecuador they saturated the capital city with their customs. The principal square, Plaza Mayor, is laid out in Spanish style with a Spanish government building facing it. Here and there, throughout the city, ornate facades of Spanish churches rise above the roof tops. The narrow cobbled streets, flanked by white, red-roofed houses with balconied upper stories, recall streets of cities in Spain.

Old Rule for Longevity

Speaking, reading aloud and singing, are useful kinds of exercise and it is supposed that this is at least a cause of the great longevity of clergymen, public speakers, teachers in universities and schoolmasters; and Doctor Andrew pleasantly observes, that one reason why women require less bodily exercise than men, is, that they are in general more loquacious.—London Spectator, October 22, 1851.

Develops A New Hobby In A Year

Hingham, Mass. —(UP)—E. E. Whitney's hobby is the collecting of envelopes bearing pictures of historical interest, with appropriate stamps and postmarks.

It is an elaboration of the idea of collecting the rather limited types of "patriotic envelopes" the Federal Government issued during the Civil War. The faces of these envelopes bore likenesses of Lincoln, soldiers, and battlefields.

Whitney browses in print shops for quaint pictures. He pastes them on the faces of envelopes; writes his own name and address over the pictures; adds the necessary stamps, and sends the envelopes—inside other envelopes to postmasters of the communities whose postmarks he wishes them to bear, requesting that the stamps be cancelled carefully and the envelopes mailed back to him.

Began less than a year ago, his collection now totals more than 1,000 pictures.

He has a picture of William Tell, postmarked Altdorf, Switzerland. The stamps show Tell with the bow that made him famous.

Other picture envelopes in his collection are those of George Washington, the original Old Oaken Bucket, P. T. Barnum, Sir Isaac Newton, the Churchyard that Gray's Elegy immortalized, and Robin Hood.

Presidents' Names Given To Houses

Cambridge, Mass. —(UP)—All but one of the seven houses built under Harvard University's $14,000,000 "House Plan" bear the names of men who have served as president of Harvard.

They are the Eliot, Lowell, Dunster, Leverett, Kirkland, and John Winthrop houses. Though the seventh, Adams House, is not named for an ex-president of the university, it is named for a family long and prominently identified with Harvard. John Quincy Adams was a Harvard professor before he became president of the United States, and Charles Francis Adams was treasurer of Harvard before he became Secretary of the Navy.

The houses put into operation as a unit for the first time last September, now accommodate about 1,700 undergraduates.

NEW NEBRASKA CAPITOL BUILT BY SPECIAL TAX

Structure, Nearly Completed, Cost State $10,000,000

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 11.—(UP)—Nebraska's new $10,000,000 state capitol, nearly completed and paid for, represents an investment of $7.18 for each man, woman and child in the state.

Had the cost the building the new state house been shared equally by each citizen of the state, that is what would have come from each pocketbook. But a special levy, effective 14 years ago, has hit only the taxpayer.

The new building, a creation of Bertram Goodhue, arose around Nebraska's old state house. It has been constructed bit by bit. The old capitol building has completely disappeared now, and the new capitol dominates Lincoln's skyline. Its 450-foot tower, containing office suites, has made it a unique building in the nation.

The first capitol tax levy was put on in 1918. For every $1,000 property valuation in the state, the taxpayer paid 30 cents to help construct the state capitol building.

Every farmer in the state, who owns a quarter of a section of land, provided it is assessed at the present average value of land in the state—$37 per acre—has paid in taxes on assessed valuation $18.64 toward the capitol cost.

Sweden has advanced to fifth among shipbuilding nations, passing Germany in this respect.

WHITE ROBIN MAKES VISIT

Hunting Packs Need Masters

LONDON —(UP)—Unemployed millionaires, if they furnish good references, now can get jobs as masters of fox hounds in several famous English hunting packs.

The hounds are advertising for them, but none but the wealthy need apply. The job is something like an ambassadorship in so far as income and expenditure are concerned. Just now there are eleven vacancies, including such packs as the Bedale, the Mendip, South Wood and Portman.

In these hard times many masters of fox hounds in several famous English hunting packs are advertising for them, but none but the wealthy need apply. The job is something like an ambassadorship in so far as income and expenditure are concerned. Just now there are eleven vacancies, including such packs as the Bedale, the Mendip, South Wood and Portman.

The $80,000 does not include his personal costs for fine horses, clothes and so on. In addition, he often has to bear almost all of the general costs, including servants' wages, maintenance of the hounds and compensation to farmers for damage to their fields and fences.

British Girl Slaps Young Count's Face

LONDON —(UP)—Because she thought a horrid little boy had kicked her dog, a young girl, named Marjorie Rodgers, slapped his face.

But what Miss Rodgers didn't know was that the "horrid little boy" was the ten-year-old Viscount Stuart, son of the Earl of Castlestewart. And she didn't learn that fact until she was summoned for assaulting him.

The prosecution declared that the young Viscount's airdales and Miss Rodgers' fox terrier were fighting, and the boy put out his foot to stop them. Miss Rodgers apologized, but said the boy kicked her dog twice.

She was bound over.

Road Building And Car Making Lead Industries

By E. E. DUFFY

The high transportation industry, consisting of the manufacture, maintenance and operation of automobiles and highways, is easily this country's greatest industry. This industry directly and indirectly, furnishes jobs for 8,000,000 people, and considering families it is responsible for the livelihood of nearly one-fourth of the total population.

Even during the quiet of 1931, the automobile kept 4,000,000 directly at work and an additional 1,000,000 men busy supplying raw materials. Highway and street building employed a million workers directly and the labor of 2,000,000 others was required in supplying equipment and materials.

But if during the last few years highway construction had lagged, no one knows just how much more serious economic conditions would be at present. What highways mean to the well being of the automobile industry may be seen in these words of L. A. Miller, president of the Willys Overland Company: "The motor car you sell is worth no more than the buyers opportunity to use it. If there were no pavements in this country you would not be able to sell a single car."

Without a road the automobile is useless. But as dollars are spent on road improvement the value of the car increases and the investment in roads returned many times over.

There is no question about which came first, the automobile or the road. The road was with us at the dawn of history. The automobile came a scant three decades ago. As matters rest today, one cannot get along without the other. The reasoning person who buys a car knows that he must also pay for highways and he does so through motor vehicle and gasoline taxes with the expectation that his money will be spent on roads. This calls to mind that in various sections of the country movements are on foot to reduce funds spent on highways and to divert funds supplied by motorists to purposes other than road building. In some cases, moratoriums on road building have been suggested. Any one of these proposals carries dire consequences.

Private business in too many instances are having difficulties. Very few are operating at a normal gait. Government, composed of the public can certainly maintain, as it did in 1931 a good pace in road building. If it doesn't, then countless thousands in both automobile manufacturing and road building will be thrown out of work. Doles will increase and this business latitude will last longer.

SOUTH AFRICA FIGHTS TO KEEP GOLD STANDARD

The Union Wages Battle Despite Internal and External Pressure

Capetown. —(UP)— Far from the world's financial storm centers, the Union of South Africa is engaged in a lone struggle to maintain the gold standard against internal opposition and external pressure. Twelve countries, including the union's neighbors, Southern and Northern Rhodesia, have quit the gold standard since Great Britain suspended it September 21.

The Minister of Finance, N. C. Havenga, in his speech, in Parliament on November 20, defending his currency policy, declared that "South Africa is on a gold basis, and will remain on a gold basis," and obtained the passage of an Emergency Powers Act in order to maintain that policy.

Opposition has continued to grow, although it is generally conceded that the Union should remain on the gold standard. Disabilities and losses resulting from that policy have multiplied, however. The South African gold reserves continue subject to a steady drain and the £10,000,000 Exchange Pool has now shrunk to less than £7,000,000.

Parliament passed legislation designed to support the government's currency policy. It passed a bill for a 10 per cent export bounty, which is to be financed by a five per cent primage duty on all imports, even British. By this new measure, the government met, partially at least, the two chief difficulties, resulting from the gap between the South African and British pounds sterling which was causing losses to exporters and primary producers and the drain of exchange from South Africa.

Flight Continues
In spite of this, the so-called "flight" from the South African pound, has continued. South African money is flowing to London because of the premium. The Reserve Bank, which is South Africa's central bank, withstood the shock and the balance in London approached exhaustion.

When efforts to raise a £5,000,000 loan abroad had failed, the Bank was permitted to set aside that amount out of its gold stocks, while the government undertook to obtain legislative sanction for a reduction of the 40 per cent ratio of gold against notes and deposit liabilities required by law.

Together with an equal amount by the commercial banks, an Exchange pool was created to buttress the South African pound. The Reserve Bank, in a formal statement, has reiterated its policy that the exchange resources of the Union are fully capable of maintaining the gold standard.

Hounds And Wolves In Tie Races Often

Nixon, Tex. —(UP)— Yes, wolf hunters here will tell you, races between wolves and dogs have ended in ties.

Take this case as an example: Recently a pack of hounds and a wolf staged a merry hide-and-seek race. The race was close. One hound stuck with the wolf. The hunters made no further attempt to follow the pack. The next day the hound and the wolf were found stretched on the ground, resting, side by side. Neither could move so taut had become their muscles.

Hunters roped the wolf, allowing him to rest the rest of that day and night. The next day he was liberated, and quickly caught and killed by a fresh pack of hounds.
